Jacob Kassab — PennDOT chief

Shapp accepts resignation reluctantly

Kassab to quit as PennDOT boss

By JOHN L. MOORE
Harrisburg Bureau

HARRISBURG — Gov. Milton J. Shapp announced Thursday that Jacob G. Kassab is quitting as state transportation secretary.

Kassab has headed the huge Pennsylvania Department of Transportation since 1971.

In announcing that the 57-year-old Kassab will be "leaving state government by the end of the year," Shapp said he was accepting the PennDOT head's resignation reluctantly.

"I have persuaded him to remain before, and I would like to be able to persuade him again but I don't think it will work," Shapp said.

Meanwhile, the scramble to fill Kassab's $40,000-a-year post has already begun.

Kassab's two chief deputies, George S. Pulakos and David C. Sims, and "a few others inside and outside of government" are being considered as possible successors, according to Richard Doran, Shapp's top aide.

Doran declined to say who the others are.

Pulakos is deputy secretary for administration; Sims is deputy secretary for highway administration.

An Erie County Democrat, Pulakos campaigned for Shapp's 1970 election and arrived in Harrisburg with the incoming Shapp administration five years ago.

Sims held a top PennDOT post under former Gov. Raymond P. Shafer.

The outgoing Kassab has been one of the governor's most visible cabinet members.

Kassab has developed a reputation as a competent administrator but PennDOT has been wracked by widespread political scandals, mostly at the county maintenance level, and is confronted with mounting fiscal problems.

Kassab told a late-morning press conference Thursday he is stepping down to devote his time to his personal finances. "This job has cost me a lot of money," he bluntly told newsmen. Kassab is reputed to be a millionaire.

The PennDOT head said his decision to resign has "no connection" with investigations that have resulted in the indictments of more than a score of agency officials across the state.

Kassab also disclosed that "I definitely am" going to make specific recommendations to take politics out of the department's maintenance operations.

He conceded that political county chairmen have continued in their traditional role of recommending maintenance employees but said PennDOT has been moving to make

State legislature leaves town without voting

Pay hike for Pa. officials in limbo

HARRISBURG (UPI) — The Pennsylvania Legislature left town Thursday until Nov. 17 leaving the future of pay hike bills for elected officials and judges in limbo.

The only apparent "winners" during the weeks of flirtation with the salary bills were the district attorneys in Third through Eighth Class counties.

The House Thursday approved, by a 136-54 vote, a bill to raise their salaries to $39,000 a year if county commissioners decide by Dec. 1 to make the district attorneys' jobs full-time.

That measure still must be approved by the Senate when it returns in three weeks.

Here is the scorecard on the other pay hike bills:

— A measure to give a maximum 10 per cent cost-of-living increase to all legislators and judges and to increase House and Senate members' expense accounts from $5,000 to $7,500 a year is in the Senate Appropriations Committee. It was sent there when supporters could not muster enough votes in the House for the bill.

Nation's welfare tab going up

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation's welfare bill increased by nearly $3.8 billion in the year that ended June 30 compared with the previous 12 months, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare estimated Thursday.

Every one of 26 welfare indicators increased in 1975, including money payments to recipients, numbers of children and adults on welfare, emergency aid to families, medical care and local charity, HEW said.

Total welfare payments jumped by 19.9 per cent from $18.8 billion in 1974 to nearly $22.6 billion, HEW estimated on the basis of statistical reports from the states.

Three Americans win Nobel prize in medicine

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (UPI) — Three Americans who discovered how viruses may cause malignant tumors in humans won the 1975 Nobel prize in medicine Thursday for accomplishing "a giant step in cancer research."

Sweden's Karolinska Institute awarded the $143,000 prize to David Baltimore, 37, Howard Martin Temin, 41, and Renato Dulbecco, 61, all veteran cancer researchers, "for their discoveries concerning the interaction between tumor viruses and the genetic material of the cell."

Baltimore is a specialist in microbiology at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and currently visiting scientist at the Rockefeller University in New York City where he received his doctorate. Temin is an expert in the field of oncology (the study of tumors) at the University of Wisconsin, and Dulbecco is a cell researcher at the Imperial Cancer Research Fund laboratory in London.

"They have found different effects and circumstances which cause cancer," Prof. Peter Reichard, a member of the Swedish institute, said. "They have not come up with any new methods for treating cancer, but their discoveries are still considered a giant step in cancer research."

The institute said, "Viruses causing tumors in human beings have not been found, except for warts. These types of tumors are of a benign nature, but it seems likely that viruses will prove to be engaged in the production of certain serious (malignant) tumors in humans."

"The three winners have found a basis for studying and working on this relationship."

As American Cancer Society research professors, Temin and Baltimore have salaries guaranteed into the 21st Century — Temin's until 2004 and Baltimore's until 2003.

They will collect their Nobel prize in Stockholm Dec. 10.

Temin said in Madison, Wis., he was "overwhelmed, proud and honored" by the award.

"There are cures for certain fast growing cancers, certain specific types of cancers, but as yet no known cures for the majority of cancers which actually cause human death," he said.

"We are working continually — many people — to try and develop better means of therapy for cancer, but now there's a general belief that we would have much more influence on human cancer if we could prevent it."

"And so, if people would stop smoking cigarettes and there were less cancer causing chemicals put out into the environment, this would be the most efficient way to prevent cancer."

House delays ethics bill

HARRISBURG (UPI) — The Pennsylvania House Thursday debated a new code of ethics for legislators and voted to let House and Senate committees enforce the bill instead of setting up a watchdog commission.

Rep. Samuel Rappaport, D-Philadelphia, chief sponsor of the measure, predicted the House would pass the bill when it returns from the election recess on Nov. 17.

The bill requires legislators and candidates for the House and Senate to make public the source of their outside income, real estate sold or leased to the state and unsecured loans over $5,000.

It also forbids legislators or their immediate families to do business with the state unless they are the low bidders on contracts.

However, the House rejected by a 120-70 vote an attempt by Rep. William Yohn, R-Montgomery, to set up an independent commission to enforce the code.

The House has an Ethics Committee which oversees enforcement of the existing code. The Senate has no committee, but Rappaport's bill would make the upper chamber form one.

Supporters of the bill said they expected to run into trouble in the Senate with the measure.

Good economic sign

Industrial output increases

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Industrial production increased 1.9 per cent in September, the largest monthly increase in almost 11 years, the Federal Reserve Board reported Thursday.

Industrial production measures the physical output of the nation's mines, factories and utilities.

The increase was the highest since a 2.8 per cent rise in November, 1964, after settlement of an auto industry strike.

This is the first of a series of economic reports that President Ford said Wednesday would be "very encouraging." The increase in industrial production means that factories and mines will be rehiring laid-off workers which should further reduce the nation's 8.3 per cent unemployment rate.

Federal Reserve said the output gains were "widespread." Strong improvement occurred in autos, household appliances, carpeting, drapery materials and clothing.

The board said there was "substantial and widespread" growth in the manufacture of steel, paper, chemicals and textiles.

The September increase was the fifth in as many months.

FDA gives lead warning on canned baby foods

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Children, particularly those who eat canned baby food, may be exposed to potentially hazardous levels of lead, the Food and Drug Administration said Thursday.

It announced a "priority program" to cut down levels of the poisonous metal in canned baby and infant food, because it said recent research has shown children absorb more lead from food and other sources than adults do, and every effort should be made to cut their intake.

It also said it will tell industry that some adult canned foods show "undesirably high" lead content over the longer term.

The agency announced results of a survey of 2,900 samples of 41 different foods produced during 1973.

"Of the (canned) baby foods, orange juice had the highest mean lead level," it said. "Next in order in the baby foods were applejuice, applesauce, and peaches ... vegetables and beef, and mixed meats."

Industry has told the FDA that lead levels in canned juice have dropped since the survey was made and are now about half of what they were during 1973, the agency reported.

"The overall results of the survey indicated that heavy metals in foods do not pose hazard to the American people," the FDA said, "though total lead intake in children who ingest lead from sources other than food could represent a potential problem."

Railroad reports losing nearly a mile of track

GARY, Ind. (UPI) — The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad has filed a missing property report on nearly a mile of tracks.

The railroad said more than 5,000 feet of rails and ties vanished from a spur line northeast of Gary.

The line, nearly a mile long, ran through parts of Lake and Porter Counties in northwest Indiana and originally was used for access to a sand mining area. It had not been used for several years.

Persons who work in the area told railroad detectives they saw several men using a forklift truck to load rails on two flatbed trailers early last month but assumed the men were working for the railroad.

Granny named police chief

ROCKWOOD, Pa. — A grandmother has been named the new police chief of this Somerset County borough, Mary Phillippi, a widow with two children and two grandchildren, was named by Mayor Phil Schaff to head a force of two parttime officers in this community of 1,000 people. Mrs. Phillippi, about 50, has been a borough police officer since January.

U.S. back in peace business

JERUSALEM — The United States has launched diplomatic moves to prevent a new confrontation between Israel and Syria on the Golan Heights where the U.N. peace-keeping mandate will soon expire, the Israeli newspaper Jerusalem Post said Thursday. The newspaper said Washington is engaged in intensive contacts with Israel, Syria, Egypt, Jordan, Saudi Arabia and the Soviet Union as part of its efforts to maintain the ceasefire on the Golan Heights. The mandate permitting 1,250 U.N. troops to man the buffer zone in the area expires Nov. 30.

High Court judge turns 77

WASHINGTON — Justice William O. Douglas, whose health is one of the capital's best-kept secrets, observed his 77th birthday as usual Thursday — a day at court and dinner with a colleague, Justice William J. Brennan Jr. The Brennans and Douglas have been dining together on Oct. 16 for years because the date marks an anniversary for both. Brennan took his seat on the Supreme Court on this day in 1956. The day and evening might seem like many in the past except that since the last celebration Douglas has suffered a stroke which has left him partly paralyzed. He spent most of this year, until the opening of the court on Oct. 6 either in a hospital or at his retreat in Goose Prairie, Wash. Douglas' left arm is useless. He can walk a little with a cane but moving any distance requires a wheelchair.

Teamster fund probed again

WASHINGTON — The government has opened a new investigation of a $1.34 billion Teamsters pension fund accused of making risky loans and depriving union members of their benefits, it was disclosed Thursday. Sens. Harrison A. Williams, D-N.J., and Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., said they learned the Labor Department was reviewing the operations of the controversial Teamsters Central States Pension Fund. They released a letter from Labor Secretary John Dunlop, who said his department "has been engaged in an appropriate review of this matter" in cooperation with the Justice Department and the Internal Revenue Service.

Big Apple still in trouble

NEW YORK — The nation's largest city raced the clock again Thursday in its continuing effort to avoid financial default. But as the hours ticked away officials were still $30 million short of the $453 million they need to pay off notes due today. In the latest development Felix Rohatyn, chairman of the state-operated Municipal Assistance Corp. (MAC), said New York would default if the Teachers Pension Fund fails to come up by today with the $30 million needed now from its overall $150 million share of the state's $2.3 billion bailout plan for the city. The trustees reportedly were meeting Thursday night at an undisclosed location.

Search on for drug truck

PHILADELPHIA — FBI agents have broadened their search for a hijacked tractor trailer containing several hundred thousand dollars worth of prescription drugs to include the entire East Coast. The rig was hijacked Wednesday at gunpoint by three men in at the ACF Produce plant in nearby Yardley, Bucks County. An FBI agent said however, "we're running out of leads. We're searching all over the East Coast, but the focus of the investigation is here."

Addonizio denied parole

WASHINGTON — Former Mayor Hugh J. Addonizio of Newark, N.J., and Anthony LaMorte, a former Water Authorities executive director, have been denied paroles, the U.S. Parole Board announced Thursday. The board affirmed the earlier denials in a decision made late Wednesday and made public Thursday. Announcements of parole decisions are routinely delayed until after the prisoners are notified. Addonizio, 60, and LaMorte, 48, were sentenced on Sept. 22, 1970, to 10-year prison terms after being convicted on charges of bribery and related offenses committed while in office.

Secret Service hit by more criticism

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secret Service radio communications can be overheard just like those of police departments, but the agency is careful not to reveal secrets on the air, a spokesman said Thursday.

The presidential protectors have "long been aware of the fact that our frequencies can be monitored," said spokesman John W. Warner.

Convict dies, six hurt in fight

TRENTON, N.J. (UPI) — One convict was stabbed to death and six were seriously injured Thursday in a slashing, 20-minute battle between warring Black Muslim sects on two floors of the maximum security Trenton State Prison.

Prison officials said the fighting broke out in a first floor classroom at mid-morning in an apparent renewal of a power struggle which saw Muslim leader James Shabazz gunned down two years ago outside his Newark home.

Deputy Commissioner Robert Mulcahy of the state Department of Agencies and Institutions which administers New Jersey prisons, said fighting started at almost the same time on the second floor where the Muslims have been permitted to set up Temple of Islam offices in the fortress-like prison.

"As a matter of fact," he said, "police departments across the nation recognize that their frequencies can be monitored. Because we know this, the Secret Service is careful as to what it transmits over its frequencies and does not transmit a communication that should be protected in that fashion."

Warner was asked about the problem after a Hartford, Conn., private detective said he had overheard Secret Service communications during President Ford's trip to Hartford where Ford's armor-protected limousine was involved in a collision with another car.

Richard Sulman said he was "troubled and surprised" to find the agency's level of communications sophistication "mundane."

"I was almost stunned by the generally low level of sophistication of their use of communications," Sulman said.

Sulman, a security consultant who specializes in advanced surveillance equipment, said he casually came upon the Secret Service agents' walkie-talkie and mobile unit communications and easily interpreted their messages.

"My hope is that someone at a high level will recognize the breach here and step in and repair it," he said. "I realize that this is a potentially serious flaw in the President's overall protection."

"The skills they used were so mundane, so simple that the public should be deeply concerned, as I was," Sulman said.

Discrimination banned

Women gain credit rights

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Reserve Board, choosing a generally even compromise between the demands of women and creditors, Thursday proposed final rules forbidding creditors from discriminating against applicants because of sex or marital status.

The rules, written and revised twice this year to implement the Equal Credit Opportunity Act that goes into effect Oct. 28, were designed to outlaw many old techniques that deny credit to working women — including the practice of asking about birth control.

Credit experts generally agreed the final rules made more concessions to the women's demands than a previous proposal published last Sept. 8. But they cited numerous "loopholes" favoring creditors.

Federal Reserve Board Governor Jeffrey M. Bucher indicated the agency would continue to listen to the counter demands of women and creditors. "Just because we've put out these final regs doesn't mean we're through," he said.

Linda Cohen, credit expert for the National Organization for Women, called Bucher's statement an "invitation" and declared, "We certainly intend to complain like hell about the things we don't like."

The major dispute centers on a provision that creditors must explain — not necessarily in writing — the reasons for denying credit to an applicant who requests such an explanation.

The first proposed regulations issued last April 23 required a written statement of reasons for denial. But the September draft dropped that requirement, prompting a cry of outrage from a group of congresswomen.

The women still insist the law cannot be enforced without written statements and they note this rule also does not require the creditors to inform applicants of their right to such a statement.

Other controversial provisions would:

— Prohibit creditors from inquiring into the birth control or child bearing intentions of an applicant. The women point to a "loophole" here because it does not prohibit creditors from using birth control information they may already have in their files.

— Allow a credit applicant to use any "birth-given" first name or surname. The women had wanted to allow any legal name.

Candid Kissinger caught on Nixon by open mike

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger was surprised to read his candid but private description of Richard M. Nixon as an "odd, artificial and unpleasant man," the State Department said Thursday.

The Washington Post published the story from its Canadian correspondent, who said Kissinger's private conversation with his dinner partners in Ottawa Wednesday night was overheard by reporters because microphones on the head table accidentally were left connected.

Department spokesman Robert Anderson said he first heard of the story when Canadian External Affairs Department press officer Glenn Buick telephoned him very early Thursday to apologize for the "technical foul-up" which resulted in Kissinger's conversation being heard in Ottawa's National Press Club.

Buick had arranged for the dinner toasts to be piped into the club so reporters could hear them. Unfortunately for Kissinger, he was unaware that the microphone placed on the dinner table for that purpose was open and "live" during dinner.

The Post reporter was thus able to hear Kissinger's remarks describing Nixon, among other things, as "unpleasant."

Kissinger also said, the Post reported, that Nixon "barely governed" during the 18 months of the developing Watergate scandal.

On the plus side, it said, Kissinger described Nixon as "one of our better Presidents," explaining:

"You know, he was an odd man. He is an odd man. But he was very decisive in his own way. He went to the heart of the problem."

In other comments, Kissinger described Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis as "sexy" and "a hard woman who knows what she wants."

Kissinger apparently was not overly disturbed by the story.

"He was in great form when I saw him this morning," Anderson said.

More problems found in birth control pills

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sex hormones used in birth control pills and other drugs can result in birth defects ranging from stunted limbs to malformed hearts, the Food and Drug Administration said Thursday.

It disclosed the findings in releasing the draft of proposed new warning labels for birth control pills which would also tell women who take them they run an increased risk of suffering fatal and non-fatal heart attacks.

The new warnings would also tell the nation's 10 million women who use the pills not to take them at all if they are over 40 years old.

The new labeling would advise women who wish to stop taking the pill and become pregnant to wait at least three months because "studies show there is a possible increased risk of spontaneous abortion in women who become pregnant shortly after discontinuing the pill."

The label would also advise any woman who misses one period while on the pill to have an immediate test for pregnancy to minimize the risk of damage to the developing child should she continue on the pill.

Economic outlook encouraging

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Top government economists and White House officials Thursday predicted the nation's output of goods and services for the last three months rose at an "extremely high annual rate" of 10 per cent or more.

The predictions indicate that economic recovery from the recent recession is stronger than was previously anticipated but in line with similar rebounds from past recessions.

The Commerce Department will release the third quarter real Gross National Product Monday and experts say according to the latest economic indicators the GNP should make the largest upturn since the last quarter of 1972.

Speaking to the Economic Outlook Conference in Anaheim, Calif., assistant Commerce Secretary James L. Pate supported a Wednesday promise by President Ford that Americans would soon receive some "very encouraging" economic news.

"Stripping away the effects of inflation, this report is expected to show that real output grew during the July-September period by an extremely high annual rate of 9 to 10 per cent — or perhaps even higher," Pate said.

Things may look bad now, but when didn't they?

Dow Jones-Ottaway News Service

In the cluster of mail the other day there was a letter from a lady with some barbs amid the flattery.

"I still look forward to your weekly thoughts," she writes, "but not as much as I used to. I used to because I thought you 'could keep your head when all about you were losing theirs.' You could always find some different way of looking at things, a calming thought to cheer me up. Now you sound as gloomy as the rest of your newspaper and all those people on television. Isn't there anything good to say or must we all despair?"

This lady, I must report, is not alone in finding these essays of late a bit on the gloomy side. Even the lady at my house, as well as our scattered children, have remarked upon a creeping melancholy, which they, no doubt, attribute to the infirmities of age.

My first reaction was to challenge all to make a list of a half-dozen topics, or even two or three, about which cheerful columns could be written. The state of the union? The state of the world? It surely wouldn't be a long list.

But that impulse was interrupted by the memory of a moment years ago with the late William H. Grimes, The Wall Street Journal's editor from 1940 to 1958. Grimes, better known around the shop as WHG, was a peppery man personally and his views of the world could best be described as irascible, which is a far cry from melancholy. He had also, though, the great gift of earthy common sense.

On this occasion of memory it was the young man who was full of woe about the stupidities of Washington, the sad state of the economy, the unrest among the people, the clouds of war and the general madness of the world. As is a young man's wont, he could find little good in it.

WHG listened to this recital, glasses perched on his forehead, with nods of agreement. "You're right," he said. "The (Last of four columns)

As the past three columns have stressed, you, a patient, can help slash your own hospital costs by Pre-Admission Testing (PAT) or not going into the hospital one hour before you must; by getting out as fast as you can and relying on home health care, by walk-in surgery or going in and out the same day.

And there is much, much more that hospitals themselves can do — and many are doing — to curb the cost up-spiral.

(1) In California, for instance, a program called CASH (Commission for Administrative Services in Hospitals) tries to apply the same time-saving procedures used by industry to hospitals.

Set up in 1963 by the Los Angeles Blue Cross Plan, CASH is now an independent organization. Last year, it reported cost savings of $47 million annually for 235 participating hospitals accounting for more than half of California's hospital beds.

Along the same lines, in Pittsburgh, 27 hospitals are using the Blue Cross Plans' management engineering staff to get help in such areas as nurse staffing, dietary, laundry, housekeeping and business operations. Computers also are being increasingly used as time and money savers for everything from streamlining admissions to monitoring cardiac patients to screening charges.

(2) "Utilization Review" committees are becoming commonplace in hospitals to make sure hospital stays are kept at a minimum and services rendered to patients are necessary and medically proper.

Of the nation's 73 Blue Cross Plans, 45 now require the health facilities with which they have contracts to set up such committees. A recent survey of the 45 Plans found all reporting a decline in the average lengths of stay in hospitals in their areas. In the Philadelphia area, the decline was from 8.5 to 7.7 days; in Virginia, from 7.6 to 6.9 days.

(3) Also significant is a movement among Blue Cross Plans to monitor claims through a computerized PUR (Plan Utilization Review) procedure which evaluates the appropriateness of lengths of stay and such service charges as X-rays, lab fees, drugs, biopsies, physical therapy. Claims are screened on the basis of 100 different diagnoses accounting for 70 per cent of all claims.

Certain standards

If there is a marked deviation from certain standards, based on previous experiences, the claim is automatically flagged and reviewed. PUR is clearly a response to consumer demands for a lid on skyrocketing health care and insurance costs.

(4) Possibly most important is the technique by which hospitals are sharing services so they can buy more economically and make more efficient use of their equipment and personnel.

The American Hospital Assn. estimates joint purchasing arrangements now exist among more than 2,000, or nearly one-third of world is in a hell of a fix," he repeated. And added: "But then it always was."

Just at the moment that may sound like a strange thought with which to cut the gloom. It certainly doesn't make present woes any the less. But it states a profound truth all the same.

If you take man's span as the Biblical three score and ten, it makes an interesting parlor game to try to find 70 years in which all was peace and tranquility — without wars, economic upheavals or social eruptions — to try the spirits of those who lived through them.

As we approach our bicentennial celebration, consider our own past history. We think of 1776 as a glorious date, and so it was, but anyone born early enough to appreciate it, say around 1750, lived through a war that saw soldiers marching back and forth across the countryside, bringing much misery to many people. And they did not have the comfort, as we do, of knowing how the story ended. Even our glorious heroes couldn't be sure they'd escape a hanging.

Or choose some period in the 19th century which, as our history books tell us, was our time of great expansion. It was also a period of terrible internal dissension ending in a war that almost destroyed the country and did leave half of it devastated.

Or consider someone who today has reached his three score and ten. Long before this morning's depressing news he has lived through four wars, two of them great world wars and one that almost tore the country apart. Add the lawlessness of prohibition days, the greatest depression of history, bloody labor riots, a world-wide monetary collapse, race riots, bombs on Wall Street, two major inflations, wholesale banking closures, government scandals from Teapot Dome to Watergate. The list is almost endless.

This remembrance of things past, to be sure, doesn't remove the gloom from today's world. It is perfectly true that we are beset by fearful economic problems. There is abroad in the land a strange unrest that seems to be sapping our social fabric. Strikes, bombings, kidnappings, violence everywhere. And on the political horizon it is hard to see right now those with the wisdom to lead us through.

All the same, there's much cheer in the reminder that the world looked ever thus. Perhaps it's hard not to be a pessimist about the immediate future, looking at the world and the behavior of the people in it.

The cheer is in the thought that what other men survived so can we. At least we need not fall down, gnash our teeth and cry none ever had such woes as we.

Feel better now, dear lady?

pay $10 to join a limited partnership which is going to build a shopping center, all you can lose is a sawbuck.

However, the partnership will use your $10 to borrow another $90 (that's the leveraging.) This is also the non-recourse loan which means that, if the shopping center goes broke, the lender can't sue you personally for his money. (There are tax advantages for certain lenders in this sort of arrangement, but that's for another time.) The way the tax law works, even though you have actually only put in 10 bucks and can only lose 10 bucks at a maximum, you can depreciate $100; that is, your 10 plus the 90 which was borrowed on the basis of your 10.

Let's say yours isn't a greedy-guts partnership accumulating a lot of other possible tax deductions. Say all you do is depreciate the shopping center over 20 years. That means in two years at $5 a year, you will have been able to deduct your original $10 from your taxes off other sources of income. In four years you will have doubled your money even if the limited partnership has not made a dime in profits, and if the shopping center goes bust in the fifth year, who cares?

Stimulating failure

The laws making such manipulations possible weren't passed by corrupt legislators at the behest of evil lobbyists. They were passed with the good faith intention of stimulating the kind of capital investment Mr. Chase advocates, but it doesn't work out that way in practice. In practice, investment tax incentives stimulate investment in failure, in unprofitable and unproductive enterprises.

Who needs a tax incentive to buy a machine that will earn a profit? You only need a tax incentive to get people to invest in dogs, and our tax laws are structured so that there is additional incentive to invest small amounts of money in big, debt-laden dogs which then bite people like nice Mr. Chase right in his bad loan department.

For the society at large, our tax incentives have channelled billions upon billions out of the very places we'd like to see the money go. Still it may be that we will have to go along with these incentives for a few more years as a gimmick to let certain troubled companies get some money to pay their debts, but Mr. Chase should realize the remedy he is proposing is what caused the trouble in the first place.

What we've done, sometimes quite literally, is to offer tax incentives to build high-rise office towers nobody wants to rent space in, and then offer more tax incentives to make movies of the same lowering infernoes burning down. Enough already.

cently put together a scrapbook of his son's basketball exploits. And another routinely handles such matters as paying a local boy for mowing Beville's lawn in Alabama.

All of this might be overlooked if Beville was laboring hard on behalf of his constituents. But we found that his traveling and his workouts in the House gym leave him little time for his district's problems.

He is absorbed, it seems, in serving himself.

Footnote: Beville denied that he had an office staffer assembling a scrapbook on his son, and defended his travel as necessary. He first denied that the (B) notation was used at all. When pressed, he said he was not sure what it might mean.

Bedtime Story: A confidential Senate memorandum lashes the pharmaceutical industry for knowingly peddling more than $34 million annually in "worthless" over-the-counter sleep inducers and tranquilizers.

Targets of the staff memo to Chairman Gaylor Nelson, D-Wis., of the Senate Small Business Committee include such widely advertised drugs as Compoz, Sominex and Nytol. The memo, prepared in advance of Nelson Committee hearings on Oct. 29 and 30, suggests the federal government ban false drug ads from the airwaves and other media.

"It is clear from the evidence we have acquired," states the memo, "that millions and millions of dollars are being spent on these worthless products . . . Over $34 million were spent in 1974 on sleeping aids alone."

Government studies show Compoz "was even less effective than a placebo (a 'sugar pill') and that Sominex "was also ineffective," says the memo. Other drugs under the committee's scrutiny include San-Man, Sleep-Eze, Sominex and Sure-Sleep.

"In view of the lack of efficacy . . . and the possible dangers from some of the ingredients . . . it is curious that the Federal Trade Commission has not moved against the advertising of these drugs," said the memorandum.

Hamilton's uncivil war

For those students of local government, there's an interesting battle of wills going on in Hamilton Township.

Two of the members of the board of supervisors, Raymond Mackes and Loren Fenner, are aligned against the board's chairman, Robert Field. And, as is usually the case in such intramural battles, the township is the loser.

Some observers say the friction is geographic in nature. Field comes from one end of the township, Fenner and Mackes from another: A sort of territorial warfare akin to that practiced in the 19th century by the cattlemen and the sheepmen.

Others claim the friction is idealistic. Field is viewed as progressive, Mackes and Fenner as conservative. New directions are suspect, those observers say, and the conservatives have the votes to block any moves they either don't completely understand or dislike for prejudicial reasons.

As a sidelight, Mackes and Fenner seldom actually vote against Field's proposals. Who needs a record as an "aginner" when you're running for re-election. So the two simply sit with mouths closed when a Field motion is advanced. With no seconding motions forthcoming, the matter dies a quiet death, and there's no negative vote recorded.

Whatever the reasons for the wrangling, and regardless of the method, the situation has cost Hamilton Township a fully operational Planning Commission: Mackes and Fenner have yet to approve a Field nomination.

The township also has lagged behind other municipalities in joining the federal flood insurance program. There's a promise to act before the Nov. 22 deadline for applying to the program, but there's every likelihood action will be allowed to lapse. That would cost homeowners and property owners dearly should local streams flood and cause damage, because flood insurance cannot be purchased unless the township enrolls in the federal program.

We seldom look for members of a municipal board to agree with each other on every issue. In fact, it would be harmful if they did. But the impasse that seems to have been reached in Hamilton is another matter. If stubbornness or whatever doesn't interfere with the public's business . . . well, it's their ulcers.

But when township business is affected, it is time to call a halt to such games. Personal and political quarrels have no place in the public arena.

Watch out, Joe

President Ford is starting to look like that fellow, Joe Btfsplk, who walks around in the Li'l Abner comic strip with a sprinkling cloud hovering over his head.

If you follow the comics, you'll remember that disaster follows that little man around along with the cloud, everywhere he goes.

The President has had two attempts on his life in the last two months. Between the two, there was an assassination scare when police chased away a gun-toting man. And now the President, riding in his limousine, is involved in an automobile accident.

Through it all, Ford has remained apparently unaffected. His secret service bodyguards, however, have a case of the willies, and Congress is investigating security procedures.

Maybe the stars aren't right for the President. Or maybe someone's trying to tell him something. In any event, if we were in his shoes, we don't think we'd go outside the White House for anything for a while.

New garbage law aimed at vacation home owners

By JOHN L. MOORE
Harrisburg Bureau

HARRISBURG — The state House of Representatives has approved legislation intended to permit owners of vacation homes and hunting cabins in Pennsylvania's most rural counties the right to refuse county-sponsored garbage collections.

Sen. Rep. Ralph D. Pratt of New Wilmington, the Lawrence County Democrat sponsoring the bill, said the measure, if eventually enacted, will help hundreds of his Mercer and Lawrence County constituents who own seasonal properties in Forest County.

The Forest County Solid Waste Authority is trying to force all people owning property in Forest County to pay for authority-sponsored trash collections, which means that many of the county's seasonal residents "are being forced to pay for garbage service they don't need," Pratt said.

The authority is attempting to charge the county's year-round residents $54 annually for trash service and is charging seasonal residents $33 a year, he said.

Pratt's bill, if approved by the Senate and signed into law by the governor, would affect Forest County and all of the state's other Eighth Class counties, including Pike and Montour Counties.

Specifically, the legislation would allow residents of Eighth Class counties to decline to have their trash collected by county-sponsored garbagemen — provided that these residents did not live in municipalities with 300 residents or more per square mile.

In other words, the exemption would apply mainly to the rural areas of rural counties.

According to Pratt, the Forest County garbage situation became controversial earlier this year when the county authority attempted to get its collecting operations into gear only to find seasonal residents in opposition.

Pratt said the controversy may be limited to Forest County currently. But he said the controversy could spread, particularly if governments in other rural counties tried to make seasonal residents pay more than their share for year-round garbage collections.

"That's not the only county that has the problem. It's going to expand," he said.

Vulnerable areas include "any place where you have wilderness, good hunting and fishing. People will have camps there," Pratt said.

His bill passed the house Wednesday, 120-76.

If it becomes law, Pratt's measure would take effect next year.

Weather group persistent in '71 bombing of Capitol

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Members of the Weather Underground smuggled a second bomb into the nation's Capitol in 1971 after an earlier one failed to go off, according to an article published Thursday in Rolling Stone magazine.

The second bomb worked and touched off the other, resulting in $300,000 damage.

While agents of the underground group were hiding a large explosive device in a small room behind a barber shop in the Capitol, it accidentally fell on the floor, the magazine said.

The Weather Underground concluded the fall had upset the bomb and caused it to fail to explode on schedule. So the next day they sneaked into the Capitol again and placed a smaller device on top of the large one.

Rolling Stone's account was based on reported interviews with members of the radical group during the clandestine filming of a movie about the Weather Underground.

According to the article, Bernardine Dohrn, Bill Ayers, Cathy Wilkerson, Jeff Jones and Kathy Boudin participated in the film, made by a group of filmmakers which included Emile de Antonio, Mary Lampson and Haskell Wexler.

Jones is quoted as saying in the film:

"The organization chose the Capitol partly to dramatize the fact that Congress was completely in (President) Nixon's pocket. There was nobody in Congress that was taking an honest, principle position against the war in Vietnam."

When it was decided to bomb the Capitol, he said, "several people volunteered to do it."

"To get past security, they carried the explosives material in on their bodies."

When they accidentally dropped the bomb "they took a couple of deep breaths and came out," Jones is quoted as saying.

"That evening, members of the organization alerted the press that the action was going to take place. It didn't happen. It didn't go off...There was no explosion."

"So the organization made a series of quick calls around the country and came up with a plan, which was to take a much smaller device and go back in and put it on top of the one that had been placed there the day before. Sort of a little starter motor."

"The second time was tremendously more dangerous and more difficult because they had called in and already claimed they were going to do it," the Underground spokesman is quoted as saying.

"So they went back in and they put a little one on it. It worked. It ignited the big one."

Leslie Bacon was arrested in connection with the bombing but the case against her was dropped for lack of evidence.

The filmmakers were later subpoenaed to appear before a federal grand jury in Los Angeles. However, they refused to cooperate and the subpoenas were dropped.

State legislator supports tough public records law

OTTAWA NEWS SERVICE
Harrisburg Bureau

HARRISBURG — The state legislator chairing a House subcommittee charged with developing a revision of the 1957 public record law says he favors a stronger law.

Rep. George O. Wagner, R-Montour, says "I'm not in favor of opening up the records of the individual elected official himself" but he does believe that most records of government agencies and governing bodies should be open for public inspection.

These records would include "correspondence, minutes, bid proposals — everything," according to Wagner who reports his four-member subcommittee will meet in the near future to work on the bill.

Rep. Norman S. Berson, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, assigned Wagner to head the subcommittee several weeks ago when Berson was asked to begin work on a bill proposed by newspaper interests to toughen the existing law.

Wagner says he sees some "problem areas" where he wouldn't want government records made public, notably in student or personnel records, but says he generally favors a stronger law.

Argentine terrorists kill five

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — An Italian executive and his police bodyguard were gunned to death Thursday and police reported three other murders and five terrorist bombings across Argentina.

The incidents increased tension on the eve of President Isabel Peron's planned appearance at a mass rally honoring her late husband Juan D. Peron.

Leftist rebels have threatened to "execute" anyone who attends the Peronist Loyalty Day rally Friday.

The national holiday marks the 30th anniversary of the day Peron's "shirtless" followers filled the city in a demonstration that won him release from prison and established him as the country's major political force.

Mrs. Peron returned to Buenos Aires Wednesday from a month-long rest.

In Rosario, 195 miles northwest of Buenos Aires, police found the bullet-riddled bodies of two men and a woman.

Ervin on W-gate report

Nixon indictment possible

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Sen. Sam J. Ervin, D-N.C., said Thursday he shares the Watergate prosecutors' report that Richard M. Nixon could have been indicted without first being impeached.

But both Ervin and Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., who were chairman and vice chairman of the Senate Watergate committee, joined former special prosecutor Leon Jaworski in disagreeing sharply with a recommendation that the Constitution be amended to allow criminal prosecution of a president.

Jaworski, while expressing reservations about the legality of a pre-impeachment indictment, said in Houston he did not believe a constitutional change would solve this problem.

Ervin, an acknowledged constitutional scholar, said at his home in Morganton, N.C.: "There's no basis for the notion that a president has to be impeached before you prosecute him."

"I'm very reluctant to add anything to the Constitution ...

we got along without prosecuting a President for almost 200 years and there's no need to amend the Constitution for something that may not happen for another 200 years."

Watergate prosecutors, in a 277-page report to Congress and the nation Wednesday, said they believed Nixon could have been charged in the cover-up but did not indict him for fear of triggering a constitutional crisis that might have impeded his impeachment.

Ervin said he felt all three special prosecutors— Archibald Cox, Leon Jaworski and Henry Ruth — did an "exceptional job" though there "should have been a little more investigation" of illegal corporate donations to Nixon's re-election campaign.

They keep on truckin'

Those 'Old Timers' just never slow up

EAST STROUDSBURG — "Enjoy yourself, it's later than you think" is the theme song of a bunch of retired Senior Citizens who refuse to retire. Their motto is, "A good laugh is better than a dose of (some) medicine."

Watching them perform at such places as the Salvation Army on Wednesday, one wonders where all that energy comes from — and maybe envies them a little.

Margaret Remagen, Bangor, keeps the audience in stitches with her comedy routines and songs.

The oldest member of the "Old Timers" group is Charles Schaeffer of Nazareth, a young 83, on the guitar. His wife, a mere 79, plays the banjo.

Esther Hoot, Easton, is at the piano, and Harvey Arner, Easton, is a clarinetist. Playing the trombone is Lester Beil, Nazareth.

Comedian Russell Young, Nazareth, plays the ukelele, too. Joe Falcone, Bangor, plays the alto saxophone and Walter Lane, Pen Argyl, blows the trumpet.

Bass John Bailey is from Butztown, and Russ Bailey, Easton, emcees the show.

The costumed Old Timers have performed before senior citizens groups in the Slate Belt area.

A HARDY HAR-HAR — Debbie Brush, far left, apparently got a "large charge" out of the theatrical misfortune of Charlie Schaefer, extreme right, who just had all his teeth pulled by "Miss" Russell Young who proudly displays them to the audience during a comedy skit staged for participants in the Salvation Army's nutrition program Wednesday.

Commission for women
endorses House Bill 580

HARRISBURG — The Pennsylvania Commission for Women today joined women's groups throughout the state in expressing support for House Bill 580, a rape bill currently before the State Legislature which affords increased protection for rape victims in court.

Speaking to a meeting held in Harrisburg to organize support for the bill, Commission Director Marie R. Keeney stated, "The Commission feels this bill is a vital one that at last gives some protection to the rape victim. Under current laws and procedures the rape victim often ends up being on trial instead of her attacker."

She told the women's groups assembled at the Harrisburg YWCA that the Commission had "some reservations about the bill and would ultimately like to see much more comprehensive rape legislation. For example, we think legislation dealing with degrees of the crime and more appropriate penalties is necessary. There is a problem in obtaining rape convictions under the current crimes code."

"However," she added, "we feel the need to protect the rape victim from harassment is so great that we are firmly supporting Bill 580 as an important first step."

House Bill 580, which has aroused much interest among women's groups in the state, amends the Pennsylvania Crimes Code in the following areas:

— Proof of resistance by a victim will no longer be required for prosecution.

— Testimony on a rape victim's past sexual conduct with persons other than the accused will not be permitted in court.

— A wife raped by her husband will be able to prosecute him, provided they are estranged and living in a separate residence, or if either spouse has filed a divorce complaint.

— A rape victim will be able to file charges against her attacker more than 90 days after her rape.

— Judges will be forbidden to advise juries that a rape victim's credibility is questionable due to her emotional involvement in the event. Her testimony will be evaluated by the same critical standards applied to the testimony of plaintiffs in any other criminal proceedings.

— Prosecution without corroboration, wither in the form of medical evidence or the testimony of a witness, will continue to be possible in Pennsylvania.

Keeney noted that, although the Commission for Women had voted to support the bill at its recent meeting, commissioners had also expressed reservations about a section of the bill dealing with corruption of minors and indecent assault.

"The Commission felt that although the bill provides added protection for the adult victim of sexual assault, it is not so successful in protecting young victims," she said.

"The victim's prior sexual conduct would still be admissible in cases of corruption of minors and indecent assault. That means young women 16-18 years old will not receive the same protection as older women."

Handbell choir performs here

STROUDSBURG — The Ringers On-The-Green, nationally known handbell choir from the Presbyterian Church, Morristown, N.J., will ring out with 86 bells at the congregational supper at St. John's Lutheran Church, Stroudsburg, on Sunday, Oct. 19 at 6:30 p.m.

This exceptional musical organization, a group of 16 high school youth, ranging in age from 15 to 18, was organized in 1971. Since that time they have traveled nearly 10,000 miles to play over 100 concerts for churches, schools, civic organizations, bell choir festivals and workshops, and on television.

Last year they gained distinction by breaking the world's record for continuous handbell ringing in the Guinness Book of Records. The latter was one of the many fund-raising activities for the group which raises all of its own traveling expenses.

Besides their public appearances in the New York-New Jersey metropolitan area the Ringers On-The-Green have toured for over eight weeks in 20 states. They have performed in two special presentations at Disneyland, Calif. and Disneyworld, Fla.

The choir and its director are members of the American Guild of English Handbell Ringers, the only nationwide organization of bell choirs and directors.

The Ringers On-The-Green are under the leadership of William A. Payn. He and his wife, Catherine, are graduates of Westminster Choir College, Princeton, N.J., and have been ministers of music at the Morristown Church since 1971. Mr. Payn is chairman-elect for Area II of the A.G.E.H.R. and the composer of many original pieces, as well as arrangements for handbells. Three of his works have just recently been published.

The Ringers On-The-Green use a set of 61 bronze bells plus a duplicate set of 25 bells for double choir pieces. Their repertoire is varied and includes pieces in many different styles and periods to comprise an outstanding program designed to present a colorful array of sounds which appeals to all ages.

Halloween
plans made

MOUNTAINHOME — Mary and John Vanderweel, Canadensis, will be Honorary Grand Marshals at the 11th annual Halloween parade in Barrett Township on Sunday, Oct. 26. They are well known in the community for their contributions to various community projects over the years.

The most recent recognition for Vanderweel was his selection as "Man of the Year" in Barrett Township for his untiring efforts towards the completion of the H. A. Tattersall Medical Center.

Frank Hendricks will again serve as Grand Marshal. Already expressing interest in entering the parade are the Cobbettes, Shirlettes, Girl Scouts, Boy and Cub Scouts, American Legion color guard, American Legion Auxiliary, ponies and carts, horse drawn surrey and brake, dune buggies, clowns, and costumed school children and adults.

Floats may be entered by registering with John A. Nauman at 595-2730 or by calling the Barrett YMCA. Prizes will be awarded for floats and best costumes.

The parade will start at the Barrett Elementary Center at 2 p.m. on Oct. 26.

Woodmen, spare not that tree

STROUDSBURG — Many people think any kind of wood will burn well, but it doesn't work that way. Some species of wood do make more heat and burn better than others.

Here are some guidelines about the values of the different species. Some homeowners and farmers may have trees that need to be pruned and others that should be removed. Cutting them for firewood may be a good idea.

Species rating as best for fireplace burning are: white-oak, apple, black birch, hickory and black locust. Rated good are: white ash, beech, black cherry, red oak, elm, maple and black walnut. Fair are: white birch, sycamore, yellow poplar, yellow and red pine, some species rated as poor for fireplace burning are: aspen, basswood, willow, white pine and spruce.

For good burning qualities, all wood should be dried at least one year. Green wood must be kept burning with kindling or mixed with other thoroughly dry wood.

Auxiliary plans
New York trip

POCONO LAKE — The American Legion Auxiliary, Post 413, Pocono Lake, will sponsor a trip to New York to see the Broadway play, "Same Time Next Year," on Nov. 15 for its members and their guests.

Transportation and tickets will cost $23. A deposit of $5 is required. For reservations write Mrs. Trudi Denlinger, P.O.B. 7, Pocono Pines, Pa. 18350, or call her at (717) 646-7823. They must be made by Nov. 1.

Departure will be made from Mt. Pocono at 8:15 a.m.

Garden patch: Clean, store tools

By JOHN E. WITHROW
County Agent
Cooperative Extension Service

Winter weather cools the enthusiasm of most avid garden buffs. But for safety, economy, and peace of mind, let us make sure all garden tools and equipment are properly cleaned and stored for the winter. They will last longer and do a better job next spring.

Sprayers need special attention because liquid sprays may clog and corrode metal parts. Dismantle the sprayer and rinse well with hot, clean water. Hang upside down until thoroughly dry, put the parts together loosely, and store in a dry place.

Clean garden stakes, poles and cords, and store in a dry place for the winter. Clean off garden tools such as spades, rakes, and hoes so they are free of dirt and dust. Sharpen the tools so they will be ready for action next spring. Wax rubbed on metal parts will prevent rusting.

Don't leave the garden hose where it can freeze. It may spring a leak if water is left inside. Drain the hose, roll it up and store in the basement or shed.

For a running start next spring, take care of the power lawn mower and other power equipment. Wash them thoroughly to remove oil, grease stains, dirt, and clippings. Run the engine for a few minutes; then let it stand until dry. Drain the fuel tank by removing the fuel line from the carburetor connection. It will completely drain if you run the engine again until it runs out of gas.

Disconnect the wire from the spark plug. If the air filter is of the oil type, clean and refill with fresh oil. Remove the spark plug and pour a teaspoon of clean oil into the opening. Cover the hole with a cloth to avoid splashing while you pull the starter rope slowly once or twice before replacing the spark plug. It is well, also, to change the motor oil now and not next spring.

Be sure to lubricate wheel bearings and any other moving parts. Wipe all the metal parts with a rag dipped in a mixture of kerosene and light oil. It would be well to have the blade on the lawn mower sharpened for next spring.

This is my last weekly "Garden Patch" column for this year. I am grateful to the staff of The Pocono Record for giving me the opportunity to bring you timely, educational material on gardening. Special thanks certainly should go to Gary Grossman for the exceptional art work that accompanied many of the articles.

Cooperative Extension Service offers many informal, educational programs and we are always happy to hear from any of you, whether it be with questions for which you need answers or comments on our program. One of the most popular and, people tell us, useful components of our service is the "Garden Notes" newsletter. I write this letter monthly and try to make it as timely and informative as possible by touching on a variety of topics relating to fruit and vegetable gardening, lawn care, flowers, trees and shrubs, houseplants, etc. If you are interested in receiving this newsletter, free of charge, call the Extension Office at 421-6430. See you in the spring!

ABOUT AN EPICUREAN SAFARI ...
Dining at "Selecta," 6 miles south of Stroudsburg, is like going to a private party abroad. The yellow sign on Rt. 191 reads only: "SELECTA (215) 588-1042 Rijsttafel." A shale driveway leads through woods to a field-stone mansion, the parking lot studded with out-of-state cars.
The host, a spice-importer from Java, introduces the gourmets in the oak-beamed Rattan Bar: Except for stubborn martini-drinkers, most enjoy the "Selectail," exotic-blue House Specialty. The restaurant features an authentic Indonesian Rice-Table buffet on Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings, by reservation only. Other cuisine may be ordered ahead. Private parties of 8 or more on other days. Phone for mailing of information/menu card.

with Bobby Westbrook

Well, at least I can now answer my own rather accusing question with which I ended my lament about cutting down those ancient trees in the 900 block of Main St. last week. "And where was our Shade Tree Commission?" I asked.

A proper investigative reporter would have found out the answer before throwing out the question, but there are times when I can sympathize with the man who says "I've already formed my opinion so don't confuse me with facts." Times when I'd rather be mad than mollified.

I'm still not mollified, but at least John Burrus has reassured me that the Shade Tree Commission was where it was supposed to be, overseeing the trees of the borough and not laying about like a mad Paul Bunyan chopping down trees on impulse.

They could have commuted the death sentence on the Daniel Stroud trees, he admitted, but then would have been charged with a solution to the sidewalk-heaving problem caused by their great roots. One discarded solution for a smooth sidewalk would have been to cut the roots, condemning the trees to a lingering death.

They do plan to replace them with fair-sized scarlet oak, thus preserving the transition from the lindens of the business district to the more spacious feeling beyond. One valid point he made was that the trees which were taken down could not be expected to live another 100 years while the new trees, planted with a proper root watering system, may well do that. Touche!

They won't, however, create the feeling of driving under a leafy canopy and I still have the feeling that there are other viable solutions. If pocket parks downtown are part of the beautification procedure, why not a pocket park around each of the remaining trees?

As for the trees which have been taken down in the hill section of Stroudsburg, they were sugar maples and were succumbing to a sort of hardening of the arteries. They, too, will be replaced, not by sugar maples but by other trees, a different tree for each street so that should a blight strike a certain species, it wouldn't affect the whole town.

Older children are Brian, 12; Sharon, 10; James, six, and Sam, four.

Their mother is the former Lorraine Marie Uhlig. Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. William Uhlig and Mrs. Catherine Hiester.

Just Between Us —

loss of those perfectly sound landmarks on Main Street, I'll admit that by and large the Shade Tree Commission is doing more to preserve the leafy appearance of the town than I am just by wringing my hands.

Besides, during this spell of Indian Summer or whatever name we apply to this period of glorious weather, I'm not mad at anybody and ready to see good in everything. Even that drizzly Saturday for Quiet Valley's opening day of October Festival gave them an indication of what the next day would be like and time to replenish their supplies, exhausted by the amazing rainy day crowd.

Even so, nobody could have expected the Sunday traffic jam. For those determined souls who, turned away at the foot of the hill, parked along the roadsides almost to Glen Brook or 611 and hiked up to the farm, there was the reward of approaching the past by the same shank's mare as its early settlers, steeped in the atmosphere of the same damp autumn woodlands.

The Woman's Club of the Stroudsburgs approached this bicentennial year in the proper atmosphere, too, at their luncheon at the Swiftwater Inn, the deed for which dates back to 1778. The furniture which has been preserved, however, is mainly Victorian and club members, prowling upstairs and down, found many reminders of their grandmother's day — some of them wearing their grandmother's own elaborate dresses.

The Music Study Club quartette also was in costume and their program included songs of early America — a program they'll probably be asked to repeat many times during the next year. The same goes for the authentically costumed Bi Centennial Fife and Drum Corps at East Stroudsburg High School.

I heard and saw them for the first time at the Convocation Dinner at the college and found them as irresistible as a Pied Piper. I'd probably follow them into battle anywhere.

This week's International Dinner at the college wasn't as international as most of them, although the speaker, having served with her husband for six years at the United Nations and six at the American University in Cairo, would have been qualified.

However, the question most women wanted to ask her but didn't was "How could you possibly have done all that, earned a master's degree and still look so young?"

Mary L. Bartlett's not-so-international theme was that people should act according to individual judgement rather than by blindly following any ideology. Having left this country in 1963 when many of the current liberal movements seemed necessary and right, she returned in 1969 when they had progressed to the point of what seemed to her an absurdity.

She probably could have been challenged by advocates of Women's Lib, Black Power, Open Marriage, or co-habitation in college dormitories, but she wasn't. However, I'll happily have any of my opinions challenged if the challenge takes the form of having lunch with a pleasant young man.

Anthony's have anniversary

STROUDSBURG — Mr. and Mrs. Chester Anthony, Stroudsburg R.D. 4, celebrated their silver wedding anniversary at a surprise reception given in their honor by their sons, Leslie and Jeffrey, at their home.

The luncheon brought together friends and relatives to congratulate the couple.

THE HAPPIEST DAYS

Little Girl Days of pinafores and paper dolls.

It seems incredible when so many have lived in beautiful girl and boy land that the philosophy of insanity that prevails in many minds throughout the world today could really be taken seriously. It denies the existence of a personal God and goes all-out for cynicism. It preaches the self sufficiency of man while reducing his lot to worse than slavery.

One brilliant man who had temporarily "fallen" for this insane philosophy tells how he turned from it back to sanity when he began observing the delicate formation of his little daughter's ear. He realized at that moment that he was not self-sufficient. He found that his church was a veritable refuge in the trying days that followed when he publicly repudiated Communism.

The Church needs your help and the help of all in fighting this insidious doctrine that would enslave the world. You can do your part through regular attendance and active participation and by urging your friends to attend church with you.

Education wrap-up

Merit students recognized

By JEFF WIDMER
Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — Three Stroudsburg High School students have won citations as Commended Students from the National Merit Scholarship Foundation.

Students are Deborah S. Heeter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Heeter of Stroudsburg R.D. 4; Frederick E. Levine, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Levine of Stroudsburg R.D. 2; and Lucinda M. Rosso, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Rosso of Stroudsburg R.D. 1.

The students were competing for thousands of National Merit scholarships.

Stroudsburg Area School District needs to improve its communications with the community.

That is one of dozens of suggestions that more than 800 community members had for school administrators. The community residents and district teachers, students, board members and administrators were surveyed last November. Their ideas about what schools should be doing and what they are doing were compiled as a Needs Assessment document.

A summary of the report was presented at the Oct. 1 meeting of the Stroudsburg Area School Board, but the details will be laid out at a public meeting to be held at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 21. Officials intend to use the document to plan the future of the district for the next five years.

In the year of the budget, class sizes are one way school boards can get more mileage out of teachers without hiring new ones to keep up with climbing enrollments.

Because of budgetary cutbacks called for by the public, class sizes in at least one Monroe County district — Stroudsburg — have increased. But the Pennsylvania and New Jersey education associations, fighting to keep the number of kids in a classroom down, have marshalled studies showing the lower the class size, the higher the students score on achievement tests. Teachers also argue that they can invent more new practices and tailor instruction to each students' needs when classes are small.

Not wanting any spoiled children, most Pennsylvania school districts — including two in Monroe County — are not about to spare the rod.

A study by the Pennsylvania Department of Education (PDE) shows that of the 292 school districts responding to the survey, 269 permit corporal punishment.

Corporal punishment is the physical punishment of a student. The state distinguishes it from "reasonable force," force used to quell a disturbance or protect life and property.

Both Pocono Mountain and Pleasant Valley school district allow teachers to paddle students for wrongdoings. East Stroudsburg School District forbids it and Stroudsburg Area School District limits corporal punishment.

Most students, PDE points out, do not favor corporal punishment.

PP & L safety reminder

STROUDSBURG — With general elections approaching, Pennsylvania Power and Light Co. (PP&L) reminds area political organizations and candidates that material attached to utility poles may be hazardous to linemen.

"Small pieces of metal hidden in wooden poles can deflect a lineman's climbing hook and cause him to fall," said James P. Walton, PP&L's Pocono area manager.

Since June of 1973, Pennsylvania law has made it a summary offense to drive a nail or a tack or to attach any metal or hard substance to or into any pole of a public utility.

Week-long events planned

It's ESSC homecoming

EAST STROUDSBURG — Homecoming 1975 will be held at East Stroudsburg State College on Saturday. The theme for homecoming this year is, "Bicentennial: Past and Present."

Among the activities scheduled for homecoming are an art show to be held from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the Student Center and the annual homecoming parade to begin at 11 a.m. on campus. The parade will feature three bands and more than a dozen floats designed by campus organizations appropriate to the bicentennial theme.

College to display 600 original prints

EAST STROUDSBURG — East Stroudsburg State College will sponsor an exhibit and sale of approximately 600 original prints from the famed Ferdinand Roten Galleries collection on Thursday, October 30 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. in Oakes Hall on campus.

Along with prints by such masters as Picasso, Goya, Renoir and Hogarth, can be seen works by many of today's American artists, some famous and some not yet famous.

Specialists to address teachers

EAST STROUDSBURG — Nine specialists from community agencies will talk with teachers in the East Stroudsburg Area School District today on "The Team Approach to Community Services."

Jack Superka, supervisor of diagnostic and Consultative services for Colonial Northampton Intermediate Unit 20 of Nazareth, will begin the program with a talk on community services.

Throughout the day, faculty will sit in on eight half-hour sessions directed by specialists in the fields of mental health, alcohol and drug abuse, and special education.

Speaking will be: Dr. William Van Meter, director of Mental Health Mental Retardation's Open Forum; Phyllis Kunda, director of the Monroe County Children's Bureau; and Stanley Goehring, director of the Tri-County Drug and Alcohol Agency.

signed by campus organizations appropriate to the bicentennial theme.

The homecoming queen will be crowned during half-time festivities of the college football game when the Warriors meet Mansfield State College. The opening kick-off will begin at 1:30 p.m.

Concluding the day's activities will be the Fred Waring Concert scheduled for 8:30 p.m. in Koehler Fieldhouse. Tickets for this concert will be available at the door.

Other student activities planned for the weekend include the trivia contest scheduled for Wednesday and Thursday in Stroud Hall room 113, the Friday evening movie, "The Sting" to be presented in the auditorium at 7:30 and again at 9:30 p.m. and a Saturday evening dance featuring "300 Years" beginning at 9 p.m. in Dansbury Commons.

Concluding homecoming weekend activities will be the Homecoming Mass to be held Sunday at 11 a.m. in Dansbury Commons and an afternoon concert beginning at 1 p.m. featuring "Storm" in the quadrangle area on campus.

Area residents are invited to browse through this outstanding collection of original graphics. A knowledgeable Roten representative will be on hand to answer questions about the prints and the artists and to discuss other prints not in this collection but which may be obtained from the gallery in Baltimore.

A world-respected authority on graphics of all types, Roten holds exhibitions and sales at major museums, colleges, art galleries and art centers throughout the United States and Canada.

The informal displaying of the collection allows visitors to examine at close range the various graphic techniques of different artists. The exhibit takes place from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on October 30.

E-burg firemen give truck rides

EAST STROUDSBURG — East Stroudsburg firemen will give free fire truck rides to children from 1-3 p.m. Saturday at the Day Street Carnival Grounds. The event was postponed due to rain last Saturday.

At the same time, firemen will have phone stickers listing the fire department's phone number available for those people who have not already received one, a fire department spokesman said.

Jersey implements short-range alternatives to Tocks

By STEVE DRACHLER
Pocono Record Reporter
TRENTON, N.J. — New Jersey has found suitable short-range alternatives to the Tocks Island Dam and is in the process of implementing them, a high-ranking state environmentalist said Thursday.

Much of the state's action, according to Dr. Glenn Paulson, has come in the past year, when the possibility was raised Tocks might not be built.

On July 31 the Delaware River Basin Commission voted

3-1 not to support construction now of a dam across the Delaware River north of Shawnee-on-Delaware. New Jersey Gov. Brendan T. Byrne cast what was considered the pivotal vote against construction.

Paulson, assistant commissioner for science in the state's Department of Environmental Protection, said the state is developing future water sources, preparing non-structural flood plain control plans and supports the continued development of the Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area. There remains one major problem, Paulson said. And that is in regard to long-range solutions to water supply problems.

"We can take care of our needs for the next 25-30 or even 50 years," Paulson said. "But it is beyond then that poses a problem."

Byrne realizes the problems and is concerned about what will happen once the short-range plans no longer meet demands, Paulson explained.

"We know we won't be around to make decisions on water supply 25 or 30 years from now," he said. "We don't want to make it any harder than we have to on our successors."

Byrne, Paulson said, is trying to come up with the answers that will best meet today's demands, but not leave impossible problems to be solved in the future.

New Jersey would be taking 300 million gallons a day from Tocks if the dam were built. If it is not built, then other means of supplying water will have to be developed.

Some are being developed, Paulson said, noting that construction of a pipeline for the Round Valley Reservoir in northern New Jersey is due to begin today.

Another possible solution would be to re-evaluate the minimum flow needed to maintain a stable Delaware River at Trenton. A study, in conjunction with the Delaware River Basin Commission (DRBC) will be made to see how much water can be safely withdrawn from the river.

New Jersey has a flood plain management law, Paulson said, which limits future development in the Delaware's flood prone areas, helping alleviate the need for a flood control dam.

Recreation will continue to be provided by the national recreation area, Paulson said, with New Jersey endorsing continued land acquisition within the park and in land slated for the Tocks dam and lake.

The land planned for Tocks could prove to be a very important resource in the future, if in 25 years or so it is decided to build a dam, Paulson explained.

"Gov. Byrne has not taken a formal position on de-authorization," Paulson said. "He is, in fact, under heavy pressure to de-authorize, but has not written to the Congress about it."

One point of view under consideration, Paulson said, is that if Tocks is not de-authorized, but instead allowed to lie dormant, it would be much easier to reconsider the situation in two or three decades.

"Harder choices will have to be made," Paulson said. "Leaving Tocks open as an option might make it easier for the decision makers then."

That is why New Jersey feels all Tocks land should be acquired now, just in case it is needed in the future, Paulson said.

Loan to cost $2,360

County borrows $300,000

By FLIP DeLUCA
Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — Hard-pressed for cash to meet general operating expenses, the Monroe County Commissioners Thursday authorized the county treasurer to take out a $300,000 loan on behalf of the county.

The money will be borrowed today at an annual interest rate of 3.75 per cent from Northeastern Bank of Pennsylvania, according to Treasurer Robert J. Coleman.

Three other banks in the county submitted interest quotes on the loan ranging from 3.87 per cent to 4.5 per cent.

The 75-day loan will cost about $2,360 in interest but Coleman said he plans to invest $200,000 of the loan in certificates of deposit which will pay about 6.5 per cent interest meaning the county will ultimately pay about $900 interest on the loan.

Coleman said the money is needed this week to meet the county payroll. The general fund is down to $22,000.

Monroe juries convict 2

STROUDSBURG — Monroe County Court juries were out about 15 minutes each Thursday before returning guilty verdicts in two criminal cases.

Raymond R. Sheerer Jr. of East Stroudsburg was found guilty of burglary and theft.

Lee C. Allard of Great Bend was found guilty of driving while his license was under suspension.

Sheerer was arrested by Barrett Township police in connection with a May 2 burglary of a residence.

Sheerer took guns, binoculars, a television and a camera and other items with a total value of about $600. Police testified they caught Sheerer in the act of burglarizing the house.

Sheerer said he remembered driving past the house and being arrested but nothing in between.

President Judge Arlington W. Williams gave Sheerer seven days to file post-trial motions.

Allard was also given seven days in which to file appeal motions. He had been arrested by state police April 2.

In other court proceedings Thursday, David Kelly of Cresco pleaded guilty to driving under the influence. He was fined $300 and placed on probation for six months. He had been arrested July 17 in Ansonia by Stroud Township police.

Peter Booros of Stroudsburg pleaded guilty to a bad check charge.

Another Rte. 209 meeting can't find relocation funds

STROUDSBURG — State and federal highway officials Thursday told members of the Monroe County Safety Council that there is no money for the immediate relocation of Rte. 209.

James Clancy, chairman of the Highway Safety Committee, said the officials were receptive to the council's suggestions and questions, but that it all boiled down to that no one has any money.

Clancy said the officials told him the best idea is to try to get Rte. 209 included on part of the interstate system.

Clancy said it is the indecision surrounding the Tocks Island Dam which is "holding up everything."

Clancy asked Philip Amos of the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation (PennDOT) in Harrisburg if an indepth study of traffic patterns on Rte. 209 and Interstate 84 could be done to determine if a large percentage of truck traffic will use Rte. 209 even when I-84 is completed.

Amos said that I-84 is expected to be completed to Mount Cobb by Thanksgiving and that more interstate trucks will then take that route instead of traveling Rte. 209.

Amos admitted that one of the problems with I-84 which makes it unattractive to truckers is that there are no truck stops nearby.

Clancy said he fears that

Monroe and Pike counties won't get much relief from truck traffic even when I-84 is completed.

He said many trucks are brought into the area by the truckstop at Bartonsville and by Roadway Express which has a terminal in Pocono Township.

Clancy said the safety council intends to follow up the discussion with the highway officials to determine, among other things, what can be done to control dangerous cargo on the highways.

PennDOT officials said two weeks ago that it will be at least 10 years before work can begin on relocating Rte. 209.

Reibman seeks U.S. senate slot

OTTAWA NEWS SERVICE
Harrisburg Bureau

HARRISBURG — State Sen. Jeanette Reibman, D-Northampton, announced she is opening an office here for her campaign for U.S. Senate.

Mrs. Reibman, the state Senate's only woman member, is seeking the Democratic nomination for the congressional seat now held by U.S. Sen. Hugh Scott.

Earlier this month, she registered the Elect-Jeanette-Reibman-U.S.-Senator Committee with the federal election commission in Washington D.C.

The senator formerly represented Monroe County.

Pike defends county sewer plan

MILFORD — Pike County Commissioners defended a $20,000 county sewerage plan Thursday before a committee from Milford Borough who fear the plan will be rejected by the Department of Environmental Resources (DER).

Commissioners termed the study "a good job" by the engineering firm of Glace & Glace, Inc., Harrisburg and charged DER with not making "specific criticisms of the plan."

Members of the borough's sanitation committee, James Colbert and Greg Myer, informed commissioners that they expected borough council to adopt the county plan as the official sewerage plan of the borough.

DER has criticized the county plan, which recommends on-lot disposal systems, because it does not conform to the State Sewage Facilities Act.

Colbert said he came away from the meeting with commissioners "satisfied with their position."

"We are going to send the study in to DER as our official plan along with a letter of intent stating that we will conduct a survey of sewerage needs at some time in the future," Colbert said.

Colbert said the borough would probably not specify a particular time when a sewerage survey of the borough would be made.

"We hope that it will be approved this way, but if it isn't we want DER to give specifics as to why they are rejecting the plan. We have to have guidelines to work from," Colbert said.

Colbert said the sanitation committee along with their solicitor, John Klemeyer, attempted to contact DER Thursday to discuss the matter.

A special meeting of the borough council is scheduled for Tuesday, Oct. 21 and the sewerage plan will be discussed at that time.

"We will probably officially submit the plan shortly after that, but we hope to meet with DER before the October 21 meeting," Colbert said.

If DER rejects the sewerage plan, Colbert said he got the impression at the meeting with commissioners that "the county may take DER to and DER reacts before court."

"I can't speak for commissioners, but I think they are exploring that possibility," Colbert said.

Commissioners said they will wait until the borough officialy submits the sewerage plan

County lunch bunch to see charity film

STROUDSBURG — What if they gave a film and nobody came?

The Monroe County Commissioners learned of that predicament Thursday when they were asked by the United Way Campaign to let county employees see a 20-minute film during working hours.

Walter Wyckoff, campaign spokesman, appealed to the commissioners to let the employees take time from their jobs to view the film.

Last week the film was shown to all interested courthouse employees and only a handful showed up. The film was shown during the lunch hour.

The commissioners agreed to show the film twice during a working day so that half the staff from each office can attend while the remaining persons keep the offices open.

Monroe County Treasurer Robert J. Coleman estimated it would cost the county about $2,000 in salaries for the 20 minutes per worker but said the expected contributions by the employees to the charity would be substantially more than the cost to the county.

In other matters, the commissioners said they will definitely appeal a reduction of $140,000 from the reimbursements for Pleasant Valley Manor as dictated by a recent state audit.

The commissioners said the state should give the county at least some of the disputed money because patients in question were certified as being eligible for reimbursement under the medical assistance program.

The commissioners also approved purchase of a typing stand for $56 from Steinhauer's.

Marshalls Creek man honored

STROUDSBURG — The board of advisers for the Outstanding Young Men of America Awards program announced recently that Thomas John McCartney of Marshalls Creek has been selected for inclusion in the 1975 edition of "Outstanding Young Men of America."

McCartney has been employed by the Pocono Mountains Vacation Bureau since March of 1974, involved directly with administrative efforts and is the bicentennial coordinator for the Pocono Mountains. While attending East Stroudsburg State College, he has maintained a 3.2 average, was on the dean's list in 1974-75 and will graduate in 1976.

Mental health clinic viewed by 40 visitors

STROUDSBURG — Over 40 people visited the Open Forum Thursday when the mental health program opened its doors to the public.

The third annual open house gave visitors an opportunity to visit the Mental Health Mental Retardation facility at 208 Main St.

"It's a chance for the public to find out what the treatment's about and to reduce the stigma of emotional disorders," stated Director Dr. William Van Meter.

Patients at the Open Forum range in ages from 16 to 84, from people with little education to those with masters degrees and from welfare recipients to people who are well off financially.

Van Meter said 70 people receive treatment with the facility treating 20 to 25 people a day.

The center opens at 9 a.m. with a coffee social hour which Van Meter said is typical of its relaxed atmosphere.

The group psychotherapy sessions allow people to work out their inner feelings and emotions.

In occupational therapy patients plan and make craft items which show them they can accomplish things and help build self-esteem, Van Meter explained.

Art therapy enables a patient to express his emotions in various media.

At 11:30 Van Meter meets with the patients before they prepare lunch.

Afternoons are composed of group sessions where patients help each other with projects, such as planning the open house.

Afternoons also include recreational therapy, which enables them to socialize and become involved in the community.

Van Meter said area agencies and entertainment facilities have been very cooperative in providing services and free passes.

Stroudsburg hosts Whitehall in key contest

By JOE MIEGOC
Record Sports Editor

STROUDSBURG — Stroudsburg has beaten Whitehall four times in the past six years, but you can throw that fact out the window. Tonight's a different story.

The Mounties are 5-1 and have won five straight, while the Zephyrs are 4-2, but their two losses have been to Parkland and Liberty, both in the top 15 Class A schools in the state.

"They hardly lost any player of note from last year," Stroudsburg coach Fred Ross says, "and they are a pretty good football team this year."

"For us to do well we're going to have to make sure we get the offense, the football and we're going to have to score a couple of times to win, no doubt about that. We're going to have to put two scores or better on the board," he added.

The Mounties have been in two 7-0 games in their last three, but not tonight, says Ross. "What will happen, if it's 7-0 or a tight game, is that they're going to get the ball too much and they're certainly able to score that way. It would make it very difficult. I just can't see how it could be a 7-0 game or something like that."

Zephyrs are big

Whitehall has size and that alone can make it difficult. Fullback-defensive end Matt Millen is 6-2, 228, and defensive linemen Gary Wagner, Dave Guzinski, Tim Christman and Dwight Henniger are all 210 or better. Offensively, the line has players like Dave Rehrig, Ed Gail, Jeff Palmer and Carmen Fragnito and Palmer is the smallest there at 185.

"It should be a pretty even football game," Ross said, "but you don't know because they are so big. They probably have the biggest Whitehall team I've ever coached against. And we have one of our smallest."

Aside from the losses to Liberty and Parkland, where they only scored a total of seven points, the Zephyrs have put 101 points on the board in their four victories.

"It will be a big hitting game," Ross stressed. "I feel we do have a good defense, especially in the last three games (allowing just six points). We've played good defense when we've had to and we've been able to stop people when we've had to."

"They have a big fullback and a big football team," he continued. "They have that initial explosion that really scares me. It's a good team and it should be a good game. We're looking forward to it and we have an excellent opportunity to beat them, but we'll have to play well to do it."

Offensively, the Zephyrs have Jeff Kurtz at quarterback and halfback Brad Rice with Millen, all starters most of last season.

To beat Whitehall, Stroudsburg will have to go after the Zephyrs right from the start at both ends.

"We'll have to be more diversified offensively in what we do because we have to keep people honest," Ross remarked. "We'll have to use the short passing game more, we'll have to run more counters."

"Whitehall penetrates well and they have all year," he pointed out, "so we'll have to be more diversified."

Traditional game

Here's where the size factor could come in. "Reach is a big factor," Ross stressed. "When you block someone 6-5 or 6-6 he can still reach over and make the play anyway. I hope we can use our quickness to our advantage and I hope we can throw the ball quite a bit."

"We have to get outside and then try to keep their offense contained."

The game is a traditional one in Ross' eyes and has, in years past, been a title decider in the Lehigh Valley League. The Mounties aren't in that shrunken circuit any longer, but the game still has a long meaning.

"One thing we have going for us," Ross said, "is that this game has always been a traditional one for us. We have always played well against Whitehall. In the past six years they've beaten us twice."

"But that's no indication for this one," he stressed. "That doesn't mean a damn thing. But we've always played well against them and we'll be ready for this one. We know what to expect, we've played against them before and we are anticipating a good Whitehall football team."

Pleasant Valley meets Wreckers at home tonight

Refreshed Bears face veteran Weatherly team

BRODHEADSVILLE — Pleasant Valley has a lot of players with experience. But tonight's opponent, Weatherly, may have more.

"They were good last year, vastly improved over the year before, and they were basically a junior team," said Bears' coach Tony Caracio. "Now they're a senior team, with 16 of their 30 players seniors. All of their starters are seniors."

What presents a problem for the Bears, back in action after a week off, is the Wreckers' running game. Quarterback Paul Richie, a converted halfback, fullbacks Craig Wallace and Frank Hinkle and halfback Dan Gerhard all have playing experience as a unit.

"We have to contain their backs and Richie on the corner," Caracio said. "I'm concerned with their corner game. Richie likes to run and does if he gets out there and sees the corner broken down."

"They run the option play well," he explained, "and they run the belly series well. They throw well, too. They're a Delaware Wing T and that's what we are. They like to power you."

Offensively for the Bears, Guy Morfesi is back after a broken toe sidelined him for four games, but he won't see offensive action and may not play too much on defense. Caracio, then, needs a big game from the backs he's got.

"I feel we're going to have a good game offensively," Caracio stated. "Our two backs, Kevin Conklin and Dale Heller, have to pull through for us. I want to try and control the ball. And I do think we can throw on them."

Getting back to Morfesi, he won't play offensive and may not play defense, either. "If we use him at all we'll use him defensively," Caracio said. "But we feel Donny Miller has done a fine job for us at linebacker, so Guy has to win that position back. That's fair to Donny and to the team."

Jason Fisher is definitely out with a bum shoulder, but the break helped heal other injuries.

Caracio expects Weatherly to try and shut off the running game, but he may surprise the Wreckers with some passes.

"It's pretty hard to say what they do on defense," he said, "because we've scouted them four games and we can't find any tendencies. But I expect them to try and shut off our running game."

"I want to try the passing game," he added, "but I'm sort of leery about it right now. I guess we've relied so much on the running game that I got spoiled. We've always had the good running game."

What few passes Pleasant Valley has thrown haven't been picked off, though. "We don't have an interception yet," Caracio pointed out, "and we've thrown well at times. The running game worked well against East Stroudsburg the first half but didn't in the second half. Still, we've been working on the passing game during the break."

But what Caracio is most concerned about is the Wreckers' offense. "They like to sweep, they screen well," he said. "Screens haven't hurt us because our ends have done a super job on the backs."

"But with the option offense and Richie's ability to run, that's a lot you have to look for. Weatherly always gets up for us and now we have to be up, too."

Blairstown area forms soccer club

BLAIRSTOWN, N.J. — Formed by a group of fans which organized an impromptu testimonial dinner for the North Warren Regional High School soccer team last year, the Blairstown Soccer Club decided recently to sponsor an amateur team and seek sanction by the United States Soccer Federation. The informal group organized themselves at the meeting, electing officers and agreeing to support a group of local players seeking entry into the Lehigh Valley Soccer League.

Additionally, the club plans a second post-season banquet for the North Warren team, which is playing an independent schedule and is currently 4-0 for the season. The dinner is expected to be held in December.

Perry Bertholf was elected president of the club. Other officers include Jack Dalton, vice president; Marie Sweet, secretary; and Carol Svopa, treasurer.

The club is currently applying for United States sanction, to be followed by acceptance into the New Jersey Soccer Federation and then release to play in Pennsylvania. Sanction by the Pennsylvania Soccer Federation would be next, as well as entry into the Lehigh Valley League.

Sanction would permit Blairstown S.C. to enter national and international tournaments with other amateur clubs.

Among the requirements of sanction will be the organization of a junior team for players aged 12 to 16 years old, and the club also plans a pee-wee level for ages 8 to 12 and possibly a team for the 16-to-19 age group.

Play on a "pick-up" basis could start as early as next spring, with scheduled league action starting next fall.

The club has scheduled its next meeting for Nov. 20 at the Blairstown Municipal Building, at 8 p.m.

SWITZWATER — Pocono Mountain can't afford to wait any longer. If the Cardinals are going to turn into a winning team, they've got to start proving it now.

The Cardinals, who haven't won since an opening night 13-6 victory over Salisbury, host Slatington at 7:30 tonight in a game which could either make or break their season.

Coach Joe Ortelli realizes his team must show some improvement tonight if it's going to build any kind of momentum for the rest of the season.

"We can't take any more disappointments," Ortelli says. "We've had enough crazy disappointments already. We've got to play a solid 150 per cent gut football game and then win, lose, or draw we can start building momentum."

Ortelli feels an all-out effort by the entire team is the big thing the Cardinals need now.

"It's important to win, but at this point we need 150 per cent from the 11 guys on the field," Ortelli says. "If we get that we will win. We've been losing because people haven't been executing and going all out. We've got to go all out now."

Samet, Lisicky meet Saturday

PHILADELPHIA — East Stroudsburg's Laurie Samet, a freshman goalie with Lafayette, and Stroudsburg's Denise Lisicky, a sophomore goalie at the University of Pennsylvania, will cross paths Saturday night when Lafayette and Penn square off in a collegiate field hockey contest at Franklin Field.

Samet played her scholastic field hockey at East Stroudsburg and is a starter for Lafayette, while Lisicky, a Stroudsburg High School player, is also a starter for Penn.

Changes may occur soon

This could be the final chance for some of Ortelli's players to prove they deserve their starting jobs. Another disappointing performance could force the Cardinals' coach to start making some drastic changes.

"This ballgame is as far as we can go," he says. "If we lose now we've got to start thinking about changes. Either we're doing something wrong or we don't have the right people at the right spots."

Ortelli and his assistants don't really feel the Cardinals' troubles are due to a lack of good personnel. Mental concentration and execution appear to be the problems.

"It's not that the boys don't do anything physically that we ask," Ortelli explained. "Our problem seems to be we're not concentrating on the field during practice. We're not putting our hearts and souls into the drills."

"That's a problem and it encompasses mental attitude," he added. "If you don't think that's important then my question is 'what the heck are you doing out on a football field?' We think those things are important and are the reason we've had winning teams in the past. If you don't concentrate mentally, you're not going to be able to function on the field."

Ortelli pointed to his team's reaction after last Saturday's 32-6 loss to East Stroudsburg as one sign the team still doesn't have the proper mental attitude.

"After the East Stroudsburg game either our emotion was drained on the field after we got behind 21-0 or we really didn't care about losing that game," Ortelli said.

Slatington game tonight could make or break season

Cardinals must prove they have winning team

"After we got behind 21-0 we played like the game was over. We stopped going full tilt. We didn't look like a football team at all," he said. "That's not a very good attitude at all."

The Cardinals' lack of offensive punch has been one of Ortelli's biggest disappointments. He can't understand why the breakdowns are occurring.

"We're just as puzzled as everyone else," he said. "We feel we have a much more balanced offensive line and it hasn't helped us a bit."

Bulldogs' offensive woes Ortelli isn't alone as a coach with offensive headaches. Slatington's Dick Snell has had troubles too, as his Bulldogs have only scored two touchdowns all season.

"Both teams have the same problems," Ortelli said. "In talking with Coach Snell he feels his people aren't concentrating on offense enough. They're not executing their blocks. He's having the same problems we are."

The Cardinals will keep a special eye on sophomore tailback Rob Pierce (6-1, 170) and quarterback Bob Harwi (6-1, 160).

"Their quarterback has tremendous potential and that's got us concerned," Ortelli said. "A lot of the points we've been giving up have been by passing."

Harwi's two favorite receivers are flanker Ron Zellner and split end Jeff Frantz.

In an effort to bolster his secondary, Ortelli has moved Bill Bramley into the starting line-up on defense. Bramley started in the secondary against East Stroudsburg and played well.

Because both teams have been having problems getting on the scoreboard, Ortelli feels the first score could be crucial. punches it across is going to "I think the first team to have a lot of momentum. That score is gonna win this game," momentum could carry though Ortelli said. "The first one that and get you a couple more."

Score of 177 earns net title by four shots

Plandome 'Festival' team champion

Special to the Record

SHAWNEE-ON-DELAWARE — Plandome Country Club of Long Island, N.Y., returned a 54-hole team score of 177 Thursday to win the net championship in the sixth annual Shawnee Fall Festival of Golf at Shawnee Inn and Country Club.

Old Westbury Country Club of Long Island and Bay View Country Club Team Two, of Toronto, Canada, finished in a tie for second at 181, four strokes behind Plandome.

Oakville Country Club of Toronto was fourth on 182 and Glen Eagles Country Club, the third Canadian club in the top five, was fifth at 183.

In a special one-day tournament for teams not in contention, Pikebrook Country Club, led by runner-up professional Ted Silvestone, won low gross honors with a three-under-par 69. Silvestone tied for the professional title Wednesday, but lost a playoff on the third extra hole to Jack Kay.

Seneca Lake Country Club of New York won the low net category with a 59, while Thunder Ridge Country Club, also of New York, was second on 61.

Americans bothered by shabby police protection

Treatment poor in Pan Am Games

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Head U.S. track coach Roy Griak, stopping briefly to watch 16-year-old Chandra Cheesebrough score a thrilling victory in the women's 200 meters, Thursday said the morale of his team had suffered at the poor treatment they had received from Mexican fans attending the Pan American Games.

"The last straw came Wednesday when fans lining the route of the 20-kilometer walk pushed and shoved Todd Scully (Big Island, Va.)," said Griak, of Minneapolis, Minn. "There just was no police control. Things like that have to leave a bad impression."

Scully finished fifth in the race in which Mexicans placed 1-2 with Daniel Bantista the winner. Larry Young was third and gave the thumbs down signal on the victory podium when the fans broke out in jeers as he stepped up to receive his bronze medal.

Asked if the continual booing and jeering of the team had affected their morale, Griak said, "Yes, I would say so."

"I would say it's an unfair situation," Griak said the athletes' performance had not been affected, "but it has given a lot of the young kids food for thought. It has given them a bad impression of Mexico, which is a shame, because we have met some wonderful people."

"It is just a small band of people who are doing this, but they are affecting the team," James King, the 400 meter intermediate hurdle gold medalist from San Diego, said, "the team is ready to go home, right now."

The U.S. lost another battle with officials when the track jury rejected a protest which was filed Wednesday when it was discovered Cuba's Julian Morrison, the silver medalist behind John Powell, had used his own disc in contravention of the rules.

Officials told the U.S. manager, Richard Hollander, there were two choices open to him: withdraw the protest or let the result stand. Then, by unanimous vote, they decided to reject the protest.

Powell, the world record holder from Cupertino, Calif., said he was ready to throw again, and was angry at the official verdict.

"I was supposed to report for duty tonight," he said. "I've stayed on an extra 24 hours for no useful purpose. It has cost me a day at my job."

Brazil's Joao De Costa, the IAAF representative at the Games, said: "There is no question the disc was a personal one. There is no question it was not valid. If there is a guilty party, it has to be a member of the Organizing Committee."

Mounties' Wilush in state golf

HERSHEY — Stroudsburg's Jeff Wilush will be among 92 scholastic boys competing in the Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic Association's state golf championship today and Saturday at Parkview Golf Course in Hershey.

A total of 41 girls are also competing in the championship.

Wilush, who qualified for the tournament with a tenth place finish in the District 11 meet, will tee off at 11:30 a.m. and will play with Ed Cimoch of Scranton Prep and Pete Jellstrom of Pennsbury.

Every contestant in the tournament must complete all 36 holes. The second round will be played at the same time Saturday.

De Costa, who attended the protest hearings as a supervisor, said "In my report to the IAAF, I shall say that the event should have been rerun."

Miss Cheesebrough's win was the only one by a U.S. athlete in the four track finals. Silvina Chivas of Cuba led coming out of the turn, and when she began to fade, the Jacksonville junior surged to the front and held off fast finishing teammate Pamela Jiles of New Orleans, the dash winner, to win by 4-100ths of a second in 22.77 seconds. Her time was a new Games record, bettering the 23.5 effort of Stephanie Berto of Canada four years ago.

But Miss Cheesebrough's moment of glory turned sour on the victory podium when she was awarded the silver medal. Officials who line the winners up for the match to the podium, had placed the girls in the wrong order. The medals were presented, and when the girls returned to the stands, they were told of the error.

Ted Castaneda of Colorado Springs ran with heart and spirit but finished only second in the 5,000 meters won by Colombia's Domingo Tibaduzza in 14:02.02; Larry Brown of Jersey City was nearly five meters adrift in second place in the men's 200 meter final taken by James Gilkes of Guyana in 20.43, while Gale Fitzgerald of East Orange, N.J., could not beat Canada's Diane Jones in the 200 meters and had to settle for the silver medal in the women's two-day, five-event, pentathlon. Miss Jones scored 4,673 points.

Cardinal frosh still unbeaten

SWIFTWATER — Four different players scored touchdowns Thursday as Pocono Mountain scored once in each period while notching its fourth straight freshman football victory with a 26-0 blanking of Slatington.

Myron Zawoiski ran 63 yards in the first quarter, Tony Kuchinski went one yard to score after Brian Courtwright and Jerry Rinker blocked a punt in the second, Tim Eilber ran 21 yards in the third period and Craig Turner went four yards in the final quarter. Barton Robinson ran for two after Eilber's score.

Connors, Venezuelan meet in Davis Cup match

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — Jimmy Connors, leading a heavily favored U.S. team, takes on Venezuela's No. 1 player, Humphrey Hose, in the second match of the Davis Cup competition today.

Roscoe Tanner meets the South American country's second-rated player, Jorge Andruw, in the opening match of the 1976 second round competition.

Mile record in jeopardy

LONDON (UPI) — The world one mile record of 3 minutes 49.4 seconds set by New Zealander John Walker in Sweden last August may not be recognized, an International Amateur Athletic Federation (IAAF) spokesman said Thursday.

There is no question that the recorded time was correct but the IAAF will consider whether the 23-year-old New Zealander used a pacemaker for the first two laps, which is forbidden by IAAF rules.

"A world record is something that is set between one man and another, or others," said IAAF executive director John Holt. "It must be a bona fide competition."

Holt said IAAF members would study Walker's case at their next meeting in Rome Nov. 5. "We will look at the claim carefully, but the point is would John Walker have been capable of this time had the pacemaker not been in the field," Holt said.

The race was held near Gothenburg, Aug. 12, and Swedish runner Govan Save-mark "towed" Walker through the first 800 yards in a fast 1 minute 54.2 seconds.

Pairings were decided at a drawing Thursday. Sunday's finals will see Connors and Tanner switching opponents with Tanner once again first on the courts for the day. The doubles match Saturday pits Dick Stockton and Eric Van Dillen, a strong duo who have been playing well together, against Hose and Andruw.

Tony Trabert, the non-playing U.S. team captain, decided to use Connors—engaging in his first Davis Cup competition—and Tanner in the finals Sunday even if the United States has already won the event on points by the time play ends. "I think we owe it to the people who bought tickets," he said. The disagreement Connors had with the Davis Cup three years ago—and then-coach Dennis Ralston — appeared far removed from Margaret Court's Racquet Club Ranch here. Cooperation and comradery is the way Trabert describes the team, including the 23-year-old super star Connors.

Trabert has spent part of his time trying to keep his team up for the event—pointing out that in the last decade the United States has lost to some nations it shouldn't have lost to and hasn't won the cup the last two years.

"It's interesting that, when a player is representing his nation in the Davis Cup, often time he plays better than he does normally in tournaments," Trabert said. "We're not taking them lightly at all."

The Venezuelans are led by their coach, Angel Garcia, a multi-talented 43-year-old veterinarian who recently participated in a medical first—the transplanting of a dog's cornea to a human eye.

Garcia, a soft-spoken man, doesn't expect his team, which has Fred Winckelman as its third member, to roll over and play dead for the United States.

"Hose is very strong when the match is important," Garcia says of his No. 1 player. "He fights for every point, so it's very difficult for the enemy to win."

As for Andruw, Garcia said: "When he's having a good day, he can beat anybody." All three of the young Venezuelan squad members attend colleges in this country.

Billy Martin and Vilas Gerulitis are the alternates for the U.S. squad but will only play if one of the regulars is unable to compete.

Metrics to alter more than rules

NEW YORK (UPI) — The fashionable American woman, now a size 12, will be wearing a 40 not too many years from now — and she'll still be fashionable.

Instead of size nine stockings she will buy twos and instead of size six shoes, 36s. Her boyfriend will wear a 37 shirt instead of a 15 and a 54 hat instead of a 6 1/2.

When they talk over going to the beach or the mountains for a day they will hope the weatherman forecasts a temperature between 20 and 30 — not in the low 80s. And if they're going to drive they will figure the distance in kilometers instead of miles and calculate how much gasoline they'll need in liters instead of gallons.

All this is the firm belief of Kenyon Y. Taylor, the South Beloit, Ill., manufacturer who is America's No. 1 spokesman for the cause of metrification. Taylor thinks it a positive crime that the metric system of weights and measures, which is almost as old as the United States, has been adopted in virtually every country except the United States.

"The approaching bicentennial of the republic ought to bring this melancholy anomaly more forcibly to our attention and make Americans start to think about the advantages of getting in step with the rest of the world," he said.

Taylor's Regal-Beloit Corp., which makes special cutting tools (it was founded in an abandoned roller skating rink 20 years ago) sponsors the National Association for Metric Education, Inc., and puts out a vast amount of literature on the subject.

Taylor travels around preaching metrification with an evangelistic fervor. He personally has conducted more than 2,000 metric seminars in the United States in the past 10 years.

He doesn't pretend to be objective about metrification because he does have a selfish interest. Being in the tool business, he thinks he would benefit enormously if tool cutting were to be gauged everywhere in the world in millimeters or screw threads were measured everywhere in metric terms.

Taylor stressed the fact there is nothing mandatory about the metrification proposals presently before Congress. "It is only proposed to create a board drawn from industry, labor, consumer organizations and the academic world to encourage metrification," he said.

The main job, he said, is to convince the service and retailing industries as well as manufacturers that they have nothing to fear from metrification, that it can come about gradually enough so there will be no burden of big duplicating inventories of metric sizes.

Erma Bombeck

When the story of our civilization is told, there will probably remain three questions of etiquette that time has never been able to answer.

1. Does she or doesn't she use a hair coloring?

2. Do you offer a lady a Ti-parillo?

3. Do you ask a man in a leisure suit to take out the garbage?

The leisure suit (for those who have been "leisureing" improperly dressed) is a no-wrinkle, two-piece slacks and casual jacket, worn with a coordinated open-at-the-throat shirt with the cuffs turned up.

In the ads, the suits are always modeled by a big, broad-shouldered man with no stomach, an animal's tooth around his neck, and dark glasses that shade his entire face. He's the type who when he says he uses a baby powder after he showers, no one laughs.

Leisure suits

For some reason, the leisure suit has captured the attention of men everywhere — even my husband, the conservative dresser. (He wears a necktie to open his mail, and considered zippers in trousers a fad until the U.S. Army issued them in World War II.)

He owns three leisure suits. "What are you going to do with three leisure suits?" I asked. "You're overdressed for tennis and underdressed for dinner."

"Good heavens, woman," he said, "don't you know what leisure means? It's your time away from employment during which a person may indulge in rest and recreation. You bum around . . . or grub around as the kids say."

During the coming weeks I was to discover that the leisure suit had its limitations. You couldn't swim in it, play golf, picnic, row a boat, camp, swing in a hammock, play ball, tinker with the car, cut grass, fish, clean out a tackle box, paint, cook in it, shoot pool or ride a horse.

"If you can't play in it, you'll just have to wear it to work," I said.

"What! And get it soiled?" Now that I've thought of it, I think the leisure suit has been one of the shrewdest con operations ever to be perpetrated on women. The leisure suit is the twilight zone of the fashion world. A man climbs into his leisure suit and he is "untouchable" by work or play.

As my husband said with that crooked little smile, "You women should get a leisure outfit that temporarily gets you some free time and rest." "We have," I said. "It's called a hospital gown."

A MESSAGE FROM

JOHN F. DEVIVO

CANDIDATE FOR SCHOOL DIRECTOR

STROUDSBURG AREA SCHOOL DISTRICT

Dear Voter:

Election time will soon be here, and once again you will have the opportunity to meet the people who are seeking public office.

For those of you who do not know me, I grew up in the Stroudsburgs, graduated from East Stroudsburg High School and continued my higher education with 6 years of college majoring in Chemical Engineering. I am a father of three children, ages 6, 3 and 1 1/2. Undoubtedly, you feel as I do about wanting the best education for our children, a concern that all candidates should share.

As a chemical engineer, I sold chemical equipment for four years in the Philadelphia-Wilmington-Baltimore area. Living and working in that metropolis exposed me to financial affairs involving millions of dollars on both the municipal and industrial levels. Today as Manager of Engineering for a local equipment manufacturer, I am engaged in developing budgets, managing and working with other people and making effective decisions.

I believe, as I think you do, that we need flexible and open management of our school district, a constant evaluation of programs and policies as well as their administration, and the need for reducing costs without arbitrarily slashing the budget.

I ask for your vote on election day so that together we can accomplish our goals.

Dead or alive, call your lawyer

By DICK WEST
WASHINGTON (UPI)—Bantam Books has just come out with the fourth in a series of paperbacks called "Whatever Became of...?"

It fills the reader in on the present whereabouts of such luminaries of yesteryear as Snooky Lanson, Ish Kabibble, Cass Daley and Evelyn and Her Magic Violin.

(The violin is alive and well and living in Argentina.)

Although written primarily for trivia players and nostalgia buffs, these books also have a certain practical value, particularly for someone in my line of work.

I have occasion from time to time to mention personages out of the past and more often than not I am uncertain whether to refer to them as "the late."

It used to be that erroneously identifying someone as "the late" only caused you embarrassment. Most likely you would get a wry note from the non-deceased containing some variation of Mark Twain's classic disclaimer, "The reports of my death are greatly exaggerated."

Some time ago, however, a new element was added. A country music entertainer sued a national magazine for having prematurely reported his demise. What is more, he won, despite a published retraction that affirmed his claim to vitality.

Although I'm no lawyer, thank heaven, as I understand this case it establishes that death that hasn't happened yet is libelous. So it is good to have books that help us avoid misapplying "the late."

There is, however, another side of the coin that anyone contemplating a libel suit of this sort should be aware of.

When a prominent public figure once was asked why he didn't sue a certain publication, he replied that he never brought libel litigation for fear they might prove it on him.

That precaution is particularly valid in cases of the sort being discussed here. Although the plaintiff may be convinced he is alive, the question is — will it stand up in court?

For if the jury is persuaded otherwise, the suit could be counter-productive.

So my advice to yesteryear's forgotten headliners simply is that — better late than never.

By Jean Adams

SWITCH: (Q.) I went with Bob for four months. Then in the summer he got hooked on baseball. He spent more time on it than with me. I decided I was being mistreated.

Then Mark came to my house one evening and asked if I wanted to go swimming. We went and really had fun. The next day we went again and I told him my troubles and after a while we were kissing. I knew then that he had to move away in two months, but at the time it didn't bother me. So I broke up with Bob.

Now that Mark has moved and baseball is over, I want to get back with Bob. I still love him and I'm sure he has feelings for me. How do I get him back? —

Not Angry Now in Pennsylvania

(A.) You made a decision about Bob. He accepted it. A decision once made and accepted sometimes can't be reversed. You could apologize to Bob and tell him you made a bad decision. But I don't believe that would be the truth because you don't seem to feel that you did. The only thing left is to tell him that you've had your fun with Mark and now Mark's gone and you're ready to take him back. I don't believe Bob would like that. So just leave him alone.

Swollen ankles

I am 23 and occasionally I get swelling of the ankles. It lasts for a few days, then goes away. Could this be related to kidney disease?

Miss E.L., Miss

Dear Miss L.: There are many different causes for swelling of the ankles. The fact that this occurs occasionally and for short periods of time is the best indication that there is little likelihood that you have kidney disease.

Nevertheless, this should be checked out with a simple urine and blood examination.

One of the common reasons for swelling of the ankles in one your age is the retention of salt during the latter half of the menstrual cycle.

The accumulation of the sodium in salt and a temporary hormone imbalance may be responsible.

Circulatory problems, drug reactions, allergic responses and the position of the feet during work may all produce temporary swelling of the ankles. A complete study will localize the cause and give you the added assurance you obviously need.

Can a non-cancerous growth ever become cancerous?

Mr. E.E., Mich.

Dear Mr. E.: It is comparatively rare for a benign, non-cancerous growth to become malignant.

Yet it does occasionally occur. This is known as "malignant degeneration" of a benign tumor. It is for this reason that doctors keep all tumors under observation. When there is the slightest suspicion that a growth of any kind has changed its size, character or color, doctors prefer to have them removed. This is the safest approach. Patients are thus spared the emotional distress so often associated with tumors.

Ann Landers

Hard headed fiance

Dear Ann Landers: I'm in love with this boy and we plan to marry. We've been going together for six months but there's a problem I can't discuss with anyone — least of all him. Doug is about 5.10, weighs 110 pounds and is not in good shape physically. I don't want to end up a young widow.

He eats the worst junk in the world, cares nothing about nourishing food or a balanced meal, and never gets enough rest. He was in a car accident two years ago and received multiple head injuries. The doctor told him he shouldn't drink but he gets loaded nearly every night and it worries me sick. I know this is harming him because he gets terrific headaches, has blurred vision and has trouble remembering things.

I just found out Doug takes LSD, uppers and downers, and also pot. I've begged him to take care of himself but he says he has to stay on the booze and junk to keep himself going. He's working two jobs trying to save enough money to buy a house so we can get married.

When I try to talk sense to him he says, "Stop nagging me. I'm doing all this for you." What can I do to help him see he's killing himself? —

Albq., N.M.

Dear Albq.: Nothing. He'll kill himself before he'll listen to you or anyone else. Doug's physical condition is the result of his mental condition. He's self-destructive and severely unbalanced.

Your only hope is to make it clear you'll have nothing more to do with him unless he goes to a doctor and gets straightened out. If he refuses, my advice is to stop seeing him. The fact that you tolerate such erratic behavior and would actually marry such a sick guy raises many questions in my mind about your mental health.

Dear Ann Landers: I am 35 years old, a housewife, and have three children. We have been married 18 years. Our eldest child is 13. My husband is European-born and does not believe that parents should go anywhere without their children. The two of us have never been out for one evening together in our entire married life.

Am I wrong to tell him I don't think this is fair to me? When I mentioned it a few times he said, "There will be plenty of time for us to go out together after the children are on their own." What about it?

He's a good husband but I —

Feel Trapped

Dear Trapped: According to my arithmetic you married this man when you were 17 years old. I'm betting he is several years your senior and has always considered you more of a child than a woman.

It is virtually impossible for a wife to change her husband's thinking about family life after 18 years — especially if it's part of his cultural heritage. You might attempt a breakthrough by asking a close relative to babysit on your next wedding anniversary or birthday — whichever comes first. And good luck. I hope it works.

Dear Ann Landers: Yesterday I walked into the kitchen and caught my mother steaming open a letter with the tea kettle. It was to my 17-year-old sister from her boyfriend.

Mom seemed embarrassed and then said, "I'm doing this because I don't trust Marie and a mother has the right to know what's going on." Is Mom right or wrong? —

Miss Dunno

Dear Miss: She's wrong. Such a mother will never know what's going on because her children won't trust her. Trust begets trust and it starts early. Your mom lost out a long time ago.

Today's TV set better than ever

The 1976-model color television sets, now at local dealers, represent the culmination of a technological revolution. This is the solid-state revolution — the elimination of all circuit tubes and their replacement by such solid-state devices as transistors, diodes and integrated circuits.

Television was the last home entertainment product to go all-solid-state because it is the most complex of them all. But now, thanks largely to solid-state, today's sets give better, sharper, brighter pictures, require less servicing, are a snap to tune, and use less electric power.

Big changes

But the one part of the set which isn't solid-state has undergone some of the most revolutionary changes of all. The color picture tube, which once had to be viewed in near darkness, now has brightness to spare.

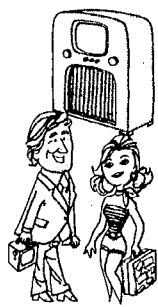

New techniques have also enhanced contrast and detail, and tube sizes are now tailored to virtually any requirement — from four to 25 inches in diagonal measurement.

Owners of older color sets know that getting a perfect picture sometimes is a difficult job — at least, it used to be. The revolution changed all that. All of the 1976 sets have automatic fine tuning which locks the tuner to the incoming broadcast signal.

In addition, most sets have automatic or pre-set controls for color intensity, tint, brightness, and contrast. In effect, all you have to do is turn the set on and select the channel. Solid-state circuits do the rest.

UHF made easy

Another improvement is the inclusion in all 1976-model television sets of tuners which make picking up the UHF channels (14 to 83) as simple as the VHF (2 to 13).

The main advantages of solid-state circuits may be summed up in two words: cool and small. The circuit tubes in old-type television sets produced large amounts of heat; a tube requires a red-hot filament to work.

Producing the heat to light the filament not only consumed a large amount of electrical power, but the heat itself was the enemy of TV set life because it caused component failure. The tubes themselves were among the parts most likely to fail.

Solid-state components produce virtually no heat — and this fact has reduced the power consumption of color TV sets by about half and sharply cut the need for repairs.

New functions

Solid-state construction also makes possible many automatic circuits which would be impractical in tube-type sets. Because of the nature of solid-state integrated circuits, they can be made to perform the functions of literally hundreds of separate components which would be too bulky and expensive to use as individual parts.

The first color television set introduced in 1954 had a 15-inch picture and sold for $1,000. A far better set with the same size picture is about $400 today. That's a revolution!

GET IT ALL TOGETHER with Panasonic's latest stereo home entertainment center, Model SE-3180. In addition to an FM-AM-FM Stereo radio, this new unit includes an 8-track player-recorder and a full-size, 11" automatic record changer to bring listeners the best of pre-recorded 8-track tapes and records.

'RIGHT ON' to 'PORTABLE POWER,' says Panasonic with its new take-anywhere 8-track player with FM-AM radio. Delivering today's big sounds from either pre-recorded 8-track cartridges or your favorite radio stations on a large four-inch speaker, it operates on AC, battery, or with optional car adaptor.

Solid state devices keep radio, TV prices down

The first 99 years of the home entertainment revolution encompassed the development of audio, radio and television — but the last five years probably have been the most significant.

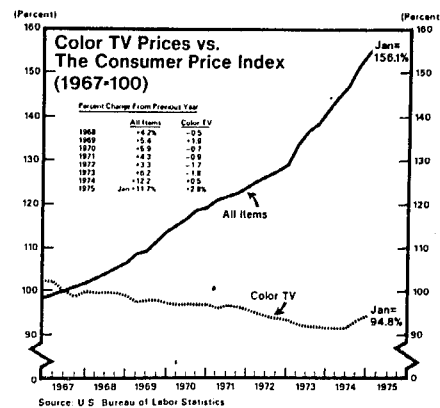

In the beginning there was the mechanical phonograph, then the electron tube which made possible electronic audio equipment and the other home entertainment products. Today, solid-state devices, the first of which was invented in 1947, have accelerated the pace of the revolution.

Significant performance

Solid-state devices — including transistors, diodes and integrated circuits — have eliminated cumbersome, heat-producing, power-hungry and failure-prone electron tubes. But even more significantly, they can perform incredibly complex tasks in a small space and at a low cost in mass-production.

A single integrated circuit smaller than a postage stamp can accomplish electronic functions which once would have required thousands of individual parts.

The first completely new product made possible by the integrated circuit is the electronic calculator which, in shirt-pocket size and at almost unbelievably low cost, can do jobs which a few years ago would have required a roomful of equipment (or a roomful of mathematical geniuses).

The solid-state revolution has revised and revitalized all existing home entertainment products. It has paved the way for color television sets which require virtually no manual tuning or knob-twiddling, color and black-and-white sets which operate anywhere on their own batteries, tiny portable radios and go-anywhere tape recorders — and the latest advance in audio realism, four-channel sound.

Electronic technology has done more than develop new and revolutionary products. It has supplied the key to holding down prices, even in our history's most severe inflation.

The government's official Consumer Price Index shows that the cost of living had risen by March 1975 to 58 per cent above the 1967 level. But in the same period, the Index indicates that portable tape recorders declined nearly five per cent in average price, portable radios went up less than four per cent and television sets rose by less than one per cent.

Since 1950, when all television sets were black-and-white, TV prices declined an average of more than 60 per cent (even though most of today's sets are color), while the cost of living more than doubled. In the same period, radio prices dropped 20 per cent.

TV leads revolution in home entertainers

The tuner... the tube... and the solid-state chassis continue to revolutionize color television sets for the home.

All three have taken another step forward in what engineers label: the state-of-the-art.

For example—

A new 18-position electronic tuning system in some sets offers the viewer complete ease of tuning VHF and UHF channels — with one knob and not two. Neither the VHF nor the UHF tuner in the "package" has any moving parts, high-frequency contacts to wear out or get dirty, and so cause loss of TV signal strength.

As for tubes, look for a broad range of practical sizes. There is a new 110 degree 13-inch diagonal in-line picture tube designed especially for the small screen portable. Other tubes, using triads of tiny picture-producing red, green and blue dots instead of the in-line tube's vertical stripes, are 17-, 19-, 23- and 25-inch diagonal in size. The five supply an answer to practically every viewing need.

Energy-saving

The all-solid state color chassis, plus a special voltage regulating system developed by Zenith, uses energy as little as 126 watts in some small screen sets. Its large screen sets need only 130 watts, which is cheering news for a besieged pocket-book.

In addition, this type of voltage regulation keeps receiver performance uniform and helps keep the picture sharp and stable under varying household voltage conditions.

Remote control is a convenience that deserves a try-out. Some have a mechanical hand control; others have one that is electronic, operates silently, with a zoom feature.

Styling

Cabinetry has taken a cue from country and casual. Many sets have adopted Country French, French Provincial, Country English, Early American, and Country styles. Others are Mediterranean, Contemporary, Ultramodern, and Transitional in design.

Black-and-white TV is conducting a quiet revolution all its own, with small screen sets particularly popular. Standouts are: those covered with the ubiquitous blue denim, those with the luggage "look," and the little receiver that is AC-DC, including battery-operated.

EARLY AMERICAN styled color TV set by Zenith offers dry sink top with two convenient surfaces for accessories or buffet. Set is all-solid state, including an electronic tuning system, with remote control.

"WE MAINTAIN OUR OWN AUDIO SERVICE DEPT."

DESIGNED FOR TODAY'S INFORMAL LIVING, General Electric's new Townhouse Collection offers console furniture styling in a new compact format. The Collection's 19" diagonal, "energy-saving" solid-state color televisions are styled in the most popular furniture looks: country oak, country pine, and contemporary. Model WYC-7508-WD, above, has a high impact plastic cabinet with walnut grained finish, and a matching stand of wood grained vinyl on wood composition board.

Television still good buy

People who go shopping today don't have to be reminded of the impact of inflation on the prices of everything from automobiles to zithers. The rude awakening comes every time there are bills to be paid and family budgets to be balanced.

While the wage earner may despair that everything has gone up in price, there is still a handful of products and services that cost less or at least no more than in the past, despite accelerating inflation.

The list of good buys still available includes color and black-and-white television sets, pocket calculators, ballpoint pens, home power tools, long-distance telephone calls, some appliances, and even the lowly banana.

Holding the line on prices in the face of soaring costs reflects greater productivity largely resulting from improved manufacturing techniques, new materials, new technologies, bigger markets and greater competition, according to William C. Hittinger, RCA Executive Vice President.

In the case of many electronic products, Mr. Hittinger explained, the advent of solid state technology has made possible smaller, more reliable, but less expensive products.

He cited color television sets as an example. A 1975 color TV set actually costs the consumer somewhat less than its 1966 counterpart and substantially less than its 1954 predecessor.

"The color TV set that launched the industry in 1954 is as different from today's sets as the Ford Tri-Motor is from the Boeing 747," he said.

The 1954 set, called the CT-100, originally retailed for $1,000 and featured a 15-inch round, long-neck tube. It had a chassis consisting of 37 electron tubes.

By 1966 the number of tubes in the chassis had been reduced to 26 and the price of the set was under $500. Many 1975 sets, such as the 15-inch (diagonal) RCA-LX-100, retail for less than $400 and use all solid state (tubeless) chassis and rectangular tubes with short-necks.

They are cheaper, lighter, smaller, simpler to operate, more reliable, brighter and technologically superior in every way to their 1966 and 1954 cousins.

Since television programming is "free" to the viewer, it has always been an important leisure time activity. In the present economic environment, with more people staying home to conserve cash, television viewing has joined radio listening among the nation's most inexpensive entertainment sources.

Actually, a 100 per cent solid state color television set provides entertainment for the whole family at a cost of about 3.5 cents an hour.

With television programming counted as "free," the only expense borne by the viewer are the cost of the television itself and the cost of the electricity used to operate it.

Scan radio offers real 'slice-of-life' listening

In addition to music, news, and sports on the standard FM and AM radio stations, there is another world of exciting, unrehearsed broadcasting going on day and night throughout the country on the public service radio bands.

Real-time "slice of life" includes firefighters responding to alarms, police on calls, harbor and pleasure boat action, mobile telephone messages, weather information, emergency tow truck dispatches, and ambulance calls.

And, with so much happening on so many different frequencies, a new type of radio called a scanner is gaining in popularity with people who monitor public service calls.

A scanning radio lets the listener set several different frequencies, and with the radio will automatically sweep or "scan" each tuned frequency for an active signal. When a station is active, the scanner locks into the broadcast until it is completed, and then continues to scan until it finds another active station.

Until recently, most available "scanners" were crystal tuned: for each frequency monitored a separate crystal (costing approximately $5.00 each) had to be purchased and installed in the set. Now, "tunable" scanners are on the market, giving users all the frequencies in an easily tuned radio.

One such radio from General Electric is called the Searcher. It provides four tunable scanning channels in the public service high band in addition to the popular FM and AM bands.

Fully portable, the Searcher contains such professional features as squelch, continuous tone control, and manual as well as automatic scanning modes. Bypass switches on the four scanning channels also permit the user to scan as few as two frequencies or to lock on a single channel at any time.

THE POPULAR NEW Searcher scanning radio from General Electric receives marine, police, and fire broadcasts as well as FM and AM stations.

Solid-state components featured in all TV sets

The GTE Sylvania 1976 line of color television sets features 100 per cent solid-state chassis in every model. GTE Sylvania is a subsidiary of General Telephone & Electronics Corporation.

The new line places added emphasis on GT-Matic tuning which has gained great dealer, distributor and consumer acceptance since its inception in 1973. The 1976 Sylvania line includes 49 color sets and five home entertainment centers which are color TV-Stereo combinations. Forty-four of the sets and all home entertainment centers feature GT-Matic self-adjusting tuning.

Negative guard band tube
Included in most sets is a negative guard band black matrix picture tube, featuring a dark faceplate which absorbs room light and provides the highest contrast and sharpest picture ever offered by GTE Sylvania.

Of the 44 color television sets with GT-Matic tuning, 37 have GT-Matic II features. Models are available in 25-, 21- and 19-inch (diagonal) screen sizes. The GT-Matic II chassis feature two integrated circuits to assure that sets maintain optimum brightness and contrast settings and maintain flesh tones over wide signal variations without significant distortions of other colors.

All GT-Matic chassis offer a number of other unique features. Included is a "vertical countdown" integrated circuit that is equivalent in performance to about 120 conventional solid-state devices. It eliminates the need for a vertical hold control and keeps the picture steady despite electrical "noise."

Other automatic circuits help compensate for the effects of airplane flutter, changes in line voltage, and problems originating at the program source. A separate circuit automatically adjusts the horizontal hold.

Exclusive circuit
An exclusive monitor circuit maintains the amount of color in the picture to pre-set levels. Perma-Tint which reduces annoying flesh tone variations, is built into all GT-Matic chassis. Additional circuitry assures brightness and contrast despite variations from channel-to-channel and scene-to-scene and automatically locks in correct fine tuning.

The GT-Matic sets have a built-in option for consumers who wish to make adjustments to suit individual taste. Each set has a key which unlocks a hidden tuning panel permitting the consumer to select new intensity, tint, contrast, or brightness levels if desired. All 19- and 25-inch GT-Matic chassis contain plug-in transistors for ease of servicing.

There are 34 color receivers in the 25-inch (diagonal) series. All are GT-Matic models and 10 feature a 20-channel electronic UHF-VHF pushbutton Touch-Tune system. Five of these models have remote controls. All use the Dark-Lite 50 picture tube and range in suggested list price from $769.95 to $869.95.

Entertainment centers
Sixteen other sets have the Dark-Lite 50 tube and range in suggested list price from $679.95 to $779.95. Five use the Dark-Lite tube and have a suggested list price of $659.95. Three sets have Color Bright 85 picture tubes and range in price from $578.88 to $599.95.

The five home entertainment centers, 25-inch (diagonal) color-stereo combinations with built-in 8-track tape player decks, have the GT-Matic II chassis and Dark-Lite 50 tube. Suggested list prices range from $1,095.00 to $1,595.00.

One 21-inch table model and two 19-inch table sets are included in the GT-Matic II series. The 21-inch unit has detent tuning, Dark-Lite 50 picture tube and a suggested list price of $549.95. The 19-inch tables also have detent tuning and the Dark-Lite 50 tube. One has remote control. List prices are $529.95 and $599.95.

THE CASUAL LIFESTYLE seems to be the trend today — and this 25-inch diagonal color TV console fits right in. The country contemporary styling is a skillful blending of rustic appointments with the more traditional lines and is well suited for today's look. Dramatic ranch oak grain finish on tempered hardboard and select hardwood solids complete the picture. Quasar's 100 per cent solid state color set also has the Super Insta-Matic color tuning feature which adjusts the set automatically to changes in room light.

Sensor helps TV adjust to light

If you're tired of getting up in the middle of your favorite show to adjust your color TV picture to changes in room light, one manufacturer may have an answer in its color tuning system. An electronic light sensor adjusts the set automatically to respond to this problem.

Quasar engineers have designed a tuning approach using a honeycomb lens on the front of the set, similar to that used in a light meter. Behind the lens is a light sensor which responds to changes in room light, activating electronic circuitry which quickly translates the need for increased or decreased picture tube brightness, contrast and color intensity, keeping all in balance.

This system is identified as Super Insta-Matic tuning. End result... in a brighter-than-normal room, there is less of a "washed out" picture effect... in a darker room... there is no over-harsh image.

The American Optometric Association, interested in visual care, has given Quasar Electronics Corporation permission to quote one of the AOA's television viewing recommendations. The recommendation, which is not a product endorsement, is to "... Adapt the set to room lighting, not the room lighting to the television set adjustment."

The Super Insta-Matic feature is available on a broad range of 19-inch diagonal, 100 per cent solid state color table models and on 25-inch diagonal, 100 per cent solid state color console models.

Put together audio center

The home entertainment revolution has transformed sound reproduction equipment from the stodgy parlor phonograph of yesterday to the versatile multi-purpose stereo system of today.

Americans today can literally put together their own stereo to suit their musical tastes and budgets. The choice is wide, and stereo systems can cost almost any amount from under $100 to well over $2,000.

Compact system
The simplest stereo outfit — and its popularity is growing rapidly — is the "compact system." This is usually a three- or four-piece set, sold under a single brand name and packed in one carton with easy assembly instructions. (If you can plug in a lamp you can hook up a compact system.)

consists of a record changer, a stereo amplifier and two loud-speaker systems. More expensive systems also include an FM stereo and AM radio tuner.

Do-it-yourself systems
Many people prefer to put their own audio systems together, selecting from components made by many manufacturers to suit their needs and budgets. Basic components might include a turntable of one make, a receiver (combination tuner and amplifier) of another, and speakers of a third brand. Dealers offer pre-selected component systems, often at a savings over the price of the same items purchased separately.

Component systems and most compacts give the purchaser the option of adding new program sources and accessories at his own pace.

The turntable or record changer and FM-AM tuner are the basic stereo program sources, but tape is becoming increasingly popular and is often added later — in the form of a cassette, cartridge or openreel deck which plugs into the amplifier section of the audio system.

Government standards
The heart of the new component or compact system is the amplifier or receiver. Thanks to new government standards, amplifiers of different makes may now be compared directly to determine power, distortion and frequency response.

The power measurements of all amplifiers are now made on the "RMS" rating system. Since the Federal Trade Commission prescribes the measurement and testing techniques, you may be sure that all advertised specifications use the same standards.

Stereo terms explained

If you're slightly confused about home music centers and aren't sure what consoles, modulars, components, stereo and four-channel are, here's some help from Zenith Radio Corporation.

When attending a live performance, the audience listens to the direct sound of the performers. This sound may be recorded and processed onto a phonograph record or tape to be played through a home stereophonic or two-channel system so that the listener can hear the performance through two speaker systems in front of him.

Total sound

However, when attending a live concert, for example, while the audience hears the direct sound from the stage, it also hears ambient sound reflected by the walls and ceiling of the concert hall. A four-channel system, with four speaker systems, more nearly reproduces this total sound heard in the concert hall: the direct musical sound plus the ambient sound reflected within the auditorium.

If the four-channel recording is made from a performance in a studio, sounds may be directed to each of the four channels (and speaker systems) in such a way as to create a "surround sound" listening experience which is so different from stereo that it must be heard to be fully appreciated.

Types of packaging
Home music centers, whether stereo or four-channel, are packaged several different ways.

1. Component systems, which usually consist of four, five, six or even more various pieces, each sold separately. Many times the same company doesn't sell all of the pieces or components, and the customer must worry about which amplifier goes with which tuner, record changer, tape unit, speakers, etc.

Component or console?

2. Console systems, which consist of a single cabinet that usually includes a built-in speaker system, a phonograph, radio and, many times, 8-track cartridge tape unit. The console cabinet usually is furniture-styled with a specific design worked into its exterior, and is best suited for those people who have the space to place the console in a room of the house which has a similar furniture style.

Zenith has two designs of four-channel consoles — credenza units with all four speaker systems in a single cabinet along with the radio and audio instruments, and three-piece units, with the rear speaker systems contained in matching furniture speaker cabinets.

Modulars popular

3. Modular or compact systems, which are the most popular. These systems usually consist of three pieces of equipment — a main modular stereo unit and two speaker enclosures. The main unit has an amplifier, plus one or more of the following: AM-FM-Stereo FM receiver, record changer, 8-track cartridge tape player or player-recorder, cassette tape player-recorder.

Most modular four-channel systems have four separate speaker enclosures, with all of the radio and audio instruments in the modular cabinet.

Checklist for big purchase

Are you ready for quadraphonic sound?

In selecting a four-channel system, remember the following:

Analyze your needs and listening habits.

Set up a budget to buy the equipment that suits your taste, living space and pocket-book.

Read, listen and compare. Your judgment of audio quality will become more discriminating as you listen more.

Do some comparison shopping and buy from a reputable dealer.

Your Horoscope

Frances Drake

ARIES (March 21 to April 20) — You now have a chance to capitalize on some of your finest gifts, two being adaptability and a spirit of enterprising. But keep reins in check. Don't be overly aggressive.

TAURUS (April 21 to May 21) — Keep domestic matters harmonious: much of the burden may rest on YOU this weekend, but you can handle it. Emphasize discretion, level-headedness.

GEMINI (May 22 to June 21) — If you stick close to facts and control that imagination of yours, you should get along fine during this busy, sometimes hectic, period. Pick your way discreetly.

CANCER (June 22 to July 23) — You are always ambitious, and this day will open new areas for you to profit by your know-how. Results may not be immediate, however, so be patient.

LEO (July 24 to August 23) — What you want and what you really need may be widely different. Be realistic about your affairs and don't put the cart before the horse, falling witlessly into traps.

VIRGO (August 24 to September 23) — It's mostly up to you whether you will gain ground, make ends meet or just drift. Some usual suggestions or directives will be absent. Be ready to plow your way through.

LIBRA (September 24 to October 23) — Day calls for your best management. Make all moves deliberately and thoughtfully, and emphasize your innate poise and sense of balance.

SCORPIO (October 24 to November 23) — You may now have an opportunity to advance through a unique idea. At least, make plans to project one at the right moment.

SAGITTARIUS (November 23 to December 21) — Mixed planetary influences. You may alternate between quick, aggressive moves and periods of slowing down, for no apparent reason. Aim at stabilization.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20) — Don't go looking for mistakes and faults. You may find more than you bargained for. Stress your optimistic side. Creative pursuits especially favored.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19) — You are usually quick to grasp opportunity, often seek — and find — it where others wouldn't even dream of looking. And NOW is the time for making use of this fine trait.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20) — Let good judgment guide your decisions. As with Leo, figure out what you MUST have as against what you would like. The latter may have to be sacrificed in part.

YOU BORN TODAY are endowed with a fine intellect, a gregarious personality and a strong sense of justice. Your artistic qualities may have the quality of genius. The Libran lead or follows with equal ease, but prefers doing things according to his own methods. You are an enthusiast, keen about every aspect of life. Therefore, you never find life dull.

Bidding quiz

Your right-hand opponent bids Four Hearts, both sides vulnerable. What would you bid with each of the following four hands?

1. ♠AQJ84 ♥6 ♦K9 ♣9732
2. ♠AK95 ♥— ♦KQJ10 ♣QJ863
3. ♠KQ7 ♥QJ96 ♦A85 ♣884
4. ♠K6 ♥— ♦AK109 ♣AKQJ972

1. Pass: The chief object of a preemptive bid is to make it difficult for the opponents to enter the bidding safely.

So if you happen to hold this hand against a four heart bid, it is not easy to decide whether to pass or bid four spades. In effect, you are between the devil and the d.b.s. If you are by nature a fearless competitor, you will bid four spades and hope the roof doesn't cave in on you. If you are by nature cautious, you will pass and hope for the best. Either way, you won't feel comfortable.

Probably 60 per cent of experts would pass, but a highly respectable 40 per cent would boldly enter the fray with four spades.

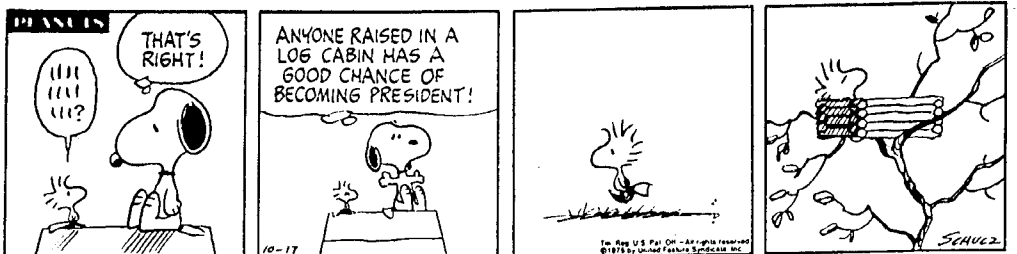

2. Double. Your partner might elect to pass the double, but even though you may feel this is undesirable, there is no reasonable alternative to the double. The dilemma you face merely emphasizes how bothersome a preemptive bid can sometimes be. Of course, it might turn out that the best possible outcome is to let the opponents play the hand at four hearts doubled.

3. Pass. Here you expect to beat four hearts, but you daren't double because all too often your partner will yank the double and the wrong side may wind up playing the hand.

The point is that a double of four hearts is ambiguous and not clearly for either penalties or takeout. It is what is called an optional double. You may not exact the full measure of punishment by passing (if the next two players also pass), but a much worse result could accrue if you doubled and partner took the double out.

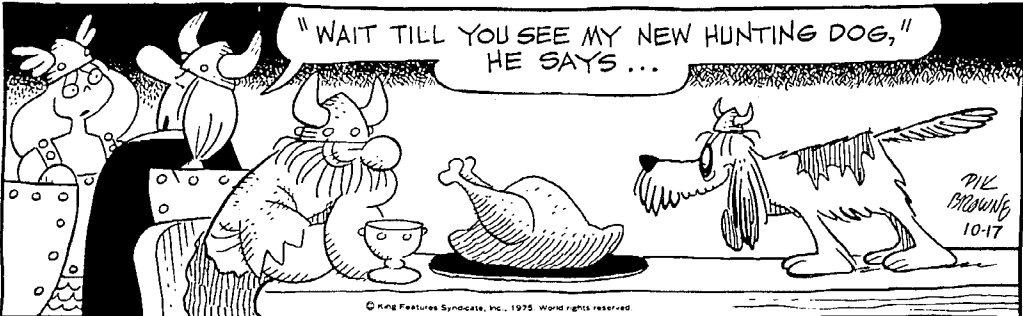

4. Six clubs. Here you should bid what you think you can make. Of course, you may go down, but against that you must weigh the probability of making either 12 or 13 tricks. The best you can do in these sticky situations is to make the bid that you think will win in the long run, and in this context a leap to six clubs must be regarded as the percentage bid.

LIQUIFIRE COOLS IT!

Liquid cooling takes the heat off
high-performance snowmobiling

If you crave a no-nonsense sled that delivers on all types of terrain, take a close look at the new John Deere Liquifire. Liquifire boasts a 340 or 440 cc reed-valve engine, set low over the skis for hair-trigger handling on hills and switchbacks. Drive Liquifire hard, sunup to sundown, without power loss . . . liquid cooling keeps engine temperatures more uniform. But liquid cooling is only one of Liquifire's traveling credentials. A wide 32-inch ski stance and a 6-inch-longer "wheel-base" work together to keep you going over bone-jarring trails. CD ignition delivers a hot spark for rapid starts. And surface-gap plugs burn clean to prevent fouling. Dual Mikuni carburetors, adjustable slide-rail suspension, disk brakes and more. Black with silver panels.

Saving money is the only good reason to buy a snowmobile this early in the year. But usually the only dealers willing to cut their prices are the ones stuck with last year's models to get rid of.
With a few exceptions, your 'Ski-Doo dealer has only brand new, factory fresh '76 models to sell. So to help him compete with the discounters, Ski-Doo is going to help you get a better deal.

The $100 Rebate from Ski-Doo.

It's a very good reason for you to start thinking about winter, now.

When You buy any 1976 Olympique* or TNT 340 from a participating dealer before October 25, 1975, Ski-Doo will mail you a check for $100. Manual Start Models.
Buy any 1976 Elan on the same terms and we'll rebate you $50.
See your Ski-Doo dealer, now. Not only will you get a current machine with all the latest developments and improvements, you'll get a handsome rebate from us after you make the best deal with your dealer.
